TUG-OF-WAR.

for the first time under the guidance of the Sophomore class met Tuesday night, when the Sophomore class met for an enthusiastic dinner last Wednesday night. The Sophomore class met for an enthusiastic dinner last Wednesday night.

SUBSTITUTES:

A count was made and showed one of the twenty-five starters had progressed for a short time the season's work and a more detailed account of the same is given below. The prospects for a repetition of a Freshman victory as in the last two years are doubtful. Earlier in the year 1914 there was no interest, but seemed evidently indifferent in the approach of what might be their most important event. However, as the time grew shorter and nearer the home coming of our men, they began to show a little more class spirit. Now it seems that, while there is little doubt of the final victory of the upper class, it will be only after a struggle and not a clean sweep. For two years, ever since 1912, we have been putting up a fight and not a clean sweep. For two years, ever since 1912, we have been putting up a fight.

Tug-of-War has usually been won by the Freshman team, but this year it is doubtful if this year will be any different. The Freshmen have a distinct advantage over the Sophomores, and the relay to the Freshmen is such that the Sophomores will have an easy time of it as they have a team with outside of Guething, the speedy nights of the Sophomore class has always won even this event, and it is doubtful if this year will be any different.

In football, little doubt is expressed as to the probable outcome of the game. The average of the 1914 team is .25 P.M.-FOOTBALL (THIRD QUARTER).

HORNETS WEST

"Say, have any of you fellows got a copy of our old Pal, Lab Reports?" The two upper classmen looked up from their work only to find Cad standing by the table with the deepest tragedy written on his face.

"What do you want, old man?" replied Dick. "Say, where is the Freshman-Sophomore football game?"

"Oh, he went to bed early tonight. You see he is on his class tug-of-war team, so he is resting up. You fellows are going out to the field, aren't you?"

"Sordest thing," answered Dick. "Please, girl, candy, and all the rest you know." "I am going to draw all the after-noon," spoke up the Billiken. "That's the system, Bill," replied Dick. "Get your drawing finished ahead of the rest of the fellows in your class so no teacher will know how smart you are. Then the next time anyone asks you about the matter carefully explain to them that there is no spirit at the Institute. Tell them that you have to work like— all the rest and never get off. Your good looks, though, don't say that you won't take a day off when you are given to you. Don't take any interest in anything except your work. It will make a man of you. Just like a certain bunch of fellows nominate all the candidates for office. Elections are always more interesting than a head-swing-a-tails-you-lose game is being worked on you. Why."

"You're branched off from engineering and gone to preaching, hadn't you, Cad?" interrupted the Billiken. "Pray, my venerable old man, what is the subject of the discourse?"

"I haven't thought of a text, Bill, but George Ade has written a good one."

"What's that?" asked Cad. "Why, he only remarked that 'college don't make folks; they only make data for applicants to the Junior.' Just then a Hydrostatics book flew through the air straight at Dick's head. That person ducked just in time, and the ball hit against the door of the Freshman's room across the hall.

"What's the matter? It isn't eighty- three yet, is it?" groaned a voice from the inside.

"Go to sleep, Freshman, rang out the Billiken. "Say, Cad, if you bring me my book, I'll go to the field with you," he added.

a very successful season as shown by the scores, and are generally expected to have a rather easy victory. Their games show evenness of condition. From first to last the team has been fully developed and shows the result of their previous work together.

The Freshmen, on the other hand, have played an uncertain and unstable game. Overwhelmed by Dean, whom the Sophomores nearly defeated in the next week, nearly winning from the Somerville eleven. This game was lost more because of erratic playing than through any superiority on the part of Somerville in team work. At times the Freshmen would play brilli-
ently, then a dazed period would hit them, and the Sophomores would fairly fly away with them; 1914 has lost more because of erratic playing than through any superiority on the part of Somerville in team work. At times the Freshmen would play brilli-
