These stone vessels were carved with party, has been traveling through Egypt and the Oriental countries, spoke of the tribes and customs of that country.

The country, in the period of the dynasties, was divided into tribes of the Northern and Southern Kingdoms. The superiority of weapons among the tribes of the North led to a union of the confederates of the two Kingdoms. In the first division of the predynastic age there were no signs for life. This was not the case, but during the later dynasties a method of writing was invented which was used by the scribes in the civil courts.

Professor Reisner illustrated his lecture with the following and instructive series of slides showing the carved pottery and stone vessels which were very skillfully decombed by the nation for the benefit of the royal family.

During the course of the time the fabrics were made, art and architecture were derived from the instruction and instructive series of slides showing the architectural School, brought good wishes of Harvard, who is in Chicago, President Russell's office to give more room to the Architectural School, brought good wishes of Harvard, who is in Chicago, President Russell, of the Tech-

ARCHITECTS’ BANQUET

plants, but that he had never known him to be anything but a modest, helpful, manly man. In elocution he said that it is great to be modest; it is great to be a good architect; it is great to have made the Institute the foremost architectural school in the country, and to be sought after by all for advice, but it is far greater to have a big and overpowersing love for all mankind.

On account of his poor health Professor Despradelle was unable to attend the banquet, and in his absence Mr. Howard Walker expressed the deep regret of the Faculty of the architectural department on the departure of the man who had so long been their most earnest guide and helpful associate. Mr. Walker then delicately presented him with an illuminated esquisses of regret, and later a letter from Professor Despradelle which had nothing but praise for the work of Professor Chandler.

Representing the graduates, J. H. Parker sung and presented a song written by Stanley Parker, which contained words of earnest appreciation of what he had done for them.

President Harkness of the Technological Architectural Society then stated that the undergraduates would tender at the banquet Professor Chandler’s kind and helpful advice, and as a little token of their respect and esteem presented a loving cup.

Foot Chandler was at this time almost overcome and stated that he sought all of these things that were offered and much belonging to some other person, for they were wholly unknown to him. It appeared, moreover, that only a small part had been made as to the honors that were to come, for after the President had read a notice praising him as a business man, poet and chief, and Mr. Arthur G. Metcalf of the Boston Society of Architects had read a paper of praise and gratitude, Mr. Newhall, president of the Boston Architectural Club, announced that he had made an honorary member of the club an honor that has only been given by him six times before. President Sturgis then presented him with a watch, the gift of the Boston Society of Architects, and stated that a medal, which had been founded for fifth year students in Technology as an architectural department in the name of Francis W. Parker.

Professor Chandler was pleased beyond all measure by these many honors, but stated again that he could not see how he deserved so much. He was most pleased with the medal, and said that it would mean much to him to know that the same men would now have this competitive prize.

The banquet was adjourned with a resolution: “We are happy” by the Technicians present.

A small Deek but full measure.

The Sophomore relay trials were very slow, and the Freshmen have a good chance to take this crown.
