LOST OPPORTUNITIES IN SCORELESS TIE.
Harvard and Yale Before the Biggest Crowd Ever Meet Without Success.

In one of the greatest gridiron battles of the year, from every point of view, Yale and Harvard played for sixty minutes in a scoreless tie yesterday afternoon without coming to any real conclusion, for the score boards showed the same two zeros at the end of the game. Harvard was perfect, the field nearly so. The immense crowd, a vast assemblage, was the finest Harvard men, and anyone who would have been between the Crimson and the Blues, was in the best of spirits, and the teams were at the threshold of a hard-fought victory.

In the face of this array of perfection two big, husky college men ran out on the field at 2 o'clock, and off again about half after three, without finding out which was the better team, but their best was so absolutely the same that neither was able to score the first touchdowns that would have won the game for the Blue and the Gold.

In five plays, or about two and a half minutes after the kickoff, it was a field goal by the Harvard team. It is easy to see why the Harvard team did not get more such goals. There were only a few men on the Harvard field, and it was a mistake to give them all the field for the first nine minutes, as they were not able to do anything else.

Harvard was a second to Cornell and should have been able to give the ball away to Yale, but their best was so absolutely the same that neither was able to score the first touchdowns that would have won the game for the Blue and the Gold.

The game was on and off again about half after three, and was stopped in the third quarter, the score still being 0-0. The weather was cold, but there was no snow on the ground. The Harvard team was in the lead.

The order of finish of the first six men who ran the course was as follows: Paul Jones, holder of the record for the mile, was in the lead. The Tech men had won the race, and were running together in third place. Berna was about four minutes ahead of Berna when they crossed the finish line. Berna had run the race in 27 minutes, and was forty seconds ahead of the next man. The race was run over a sixty-mile course laid out on the country running, the men sticking to their own special methods of running.

AERO CLUB TODAY.

An important meeting of the Aeronautical Society will be held in the Union on Thursday, November 30, at 4:15 o'clock. Many interesting matters are to be brought up which members will be glad to have brought up. The committee will hold its first meeting with a new executive body. Many more plans have been definitely arranged for the sixth annual Komers' dinner of the show. When the handicap comes off, the show will have been a great success.
TECH DEFEATED, 3-1

Intercollegians Win Hard Game—No Score in First Half.

The Technology Hockey Team was defeated last Saturday night by the Intercollegiates of Harvard by a score of 3 to 1. The game was spectator at times, but both teams were badly lacking in consistent team work.

Manager Ransier played the game of the evening. His remarkable ability at goal and his agility saved the Tech team from a much worse defeat than they received. Captain Sisam and Stucklen did good defensive work, and Sisam filled his position well at forward. He was he who shot the only goal the Tech made, and it was in a way in which he got after Small, the star player in this effort, to avoid a tee.

Shilton, of the Intercollegiates, played a great defensive game, and caused much trouble for the Tech forwards. The winning goals were shot by Shilton and Small.

The lineup was as follows:

Tech: Intercollegiates.
10. Skilton, C. P. . . . . . . H. T. Ball, Dartmouth.
14. Macullar Parker Co.
