ONCE again Technology takes a step forward in the advancement of its undergraduate facilities. Construction of the Richard Hoarner Memorial Hall, a dormitory for medical students, is in progress. This move is evidence of the student body's awareness of the need for quarters where sick students can be properly watched and cared for. The majority of students attending the Institute live away from home in dormitories on college property. Most of these dormitories are overcrowded and some are in need of immediate repairs. In the past certain students have stated the opinion that they would be afraid to risk their health in these dormitories and that the only way to ensure their safety was to edit them.

Several students have already moved into the new dormitory, which is to be opened for the fall term. The new building is a six-story, stone structure, with a central lobby and four wings. It is designed to accommodate about 400 students. The rooms are furnished with beds, desks, and chairs, and each wing has a common room for study and socializing. The dormitory is equipped with modern sanitation facilities, including central heating and air conditioning.

However, the new dormitory is not without its problems. Some students have complained about the lack of privacy and the noise levels in the common rooms. Others have expressed concern about the cost of living in the dormitory, which is higher than that of off-campus housing.

Despite these issues, the new dormitory represents a significant step forward in the provision of quality living accommodations for students. It is hoped that this move will improve the health and well-being of the student body, while also meeting the needs of the growing Institute.
