was seriously wrong." This statement happens to be the first in a letter written by Kenneth M. Gold, '29, to the Harvard Crimson, about his experiences as a radio operator in the Mc-Millan Northern Expedition.

The expedition under Capt. Perry Drake, Rear Adm. Charles W. Gilman and William D. McMillan, Jr., set sail from Rockland, Me., on July 24, 1933. The ship, named the "Radio, went on its maiden voyage for the purpose of making aerial surveys and of collecting scientific informa-

WHERE ARE THE SOPHOMORES?

RULES, but made, they are no consequence unless enforced. When the freshman rules committee drew up the new code and put it in force, they may have seemingly adequate provisions for the enforcement of the few rules that they set down. As yet, one cannot attack the propriety of the present system, for the regulations which have not lived up to their share of the bargain, which otherwise would be impossible in these five years.

Most of the freshmen have obeyed the simplest and easiest rules to the letter. They and their counselors don't want to wear it! As to the remaining rules, they have not as much as made an attempt to carry them out. The undergraduates, on the other hand, have been to a certain amount in charge of the administration of these rules. It is a common knowledge that the main reason for the freshet is that the cofferdam had excluded a large amount of water from the area of Back Bay, while the water that formerly flowed in from the Charles, and that in all the buildings were shouts and cries of "Hello," or "How are you," or "Good morning," or "Good afternoon," or "Good evening," or "What's the matter?" or "What's up?" or "What's the news?" or "What's been happening?" or "What are you doing?" or "What are you up to?" or "What are you working on?" or "What are you planning to do?" or "What are you going to do?" or "What are you going to say?" or "What are you going to write?" or "What are you going to publish?" or "What are you going to do with your life?" or "What are you going to do with your time?" or "What are you going to do with your money?" or "What are you going to do with your health?" or "What are you going to do with your future?" or "What are you going to do with your past?" or "What are you going to do with your present?" or "What are you going to do with your life?" or "What are you going to do with your mind?" or "What are you going to do with your body?" or "What are you going to do with your soul?" or "What are you going to do with your spirit?" or "What are you going to do with your heart?" or "What are you going to do with your will?" or "What are you going to do with your courage?" or "What are you going to do with your strength?" or "What are you going to do with your love?" or "What are you going to do with your joy?" or "What are you going to do with your pain?" or "What are you going to do with your fear?" or "What are you going to do with your sorrow?" or "What are you going to do with your joy?

Charles River Basin Was Once Broad

Present Dan Built After Fifty Years of Agitation By

Boston Public

So long as the present Charles River Basin has been considered a matter of great concern to many students and residents, there have been many years when the basin has been almost entirely covered with water. This was due to the fact that the basin was essentially a part of the Charles River, which flowed through the city in a northerly direction. However, with the construction of the Panama Canal and the completion of the Panama-Pacific Exposition in 1915, the basin was drained and the land was prepared for urban development.

The basin was originally a vast body of water, covering an area of approximately 20 square miles. It was formed by the confluence of the Charles River and the Mystic River, and was bordered by the Back Bay, which was formerly a saltwater estuary. The basin was also connected to the ocean through the Charles River, which entered the basin from the north.

In 1870, the Boston City Council voted to create a park along the waterfront, which would include the basin. The park was to be named after the famous Massachusetts politician, William E. Fuller.

In 1872, the first park was opened, and it soon became a popular destination for residents of the city. However, as the population of the city continued to grow, the park became overcrowded, and it was decided to drain the basin and create a new park.

The drainage of the basin began in 1873, and it was completed in 1874. The basin was drained by means of a series of dikes and channels, which were designed to divert the flow of the Charles River and the Mystic River into the nearby Back Bay. The basin was then filled with dirt and gravel, and a series of streets and parks were constructed on the newly created land.

The park became known as" Fuller's Park," and it was later renamed" Charles River Basin." It was one of the largest public parks in the city, and it was a popular destination for residents and visitors alike.

In the early 20th century, the basin was once again drained, and it was filled with dirt and gravel once more. The land was then used for the construction of a new park, which was dedicated in 1920. The park was named after the city's first mayor, William Blackstone, and it was known as" Blackstone Park.

The basin and the park have been the subject of much debate and controversy over the years. Some residents have argued that the basin should be restored to its former glory, while others have argued that it is a valuable asset for the city and should be preserved.

In recent years, there have been efforts to rejuvenate the basin and the park, and to make it a more attractive destination for residents and visitors.

The basin is now home to a variety of wildlife, including ducks, geese, and other waterfowl. It is also a popular destination for birdwatchers, and it is home to a variety of fish and other aquatic animals.

The park is now a popular destination for residents and visitors alike. It features a variety of attractions, including a lake, a fountain, and a bandstand. It is also a popular destination for picnicking, and it is home to a variety of outdoor activities, including hiking, cycling, and fishing.

The basin and the park have been an important part of the city's history and culture for over 150 years, and they are expected to continue to be a significant part of the city's future for many years to come.
NORTHEASTERN PLAYS FAST GAME TO 5-0
Northeastern's huskies easily triumphed over Technology's soccer team by the one-sided score of 5 to 0. The huskies, led by their star Striker Dwyer, scored three goals, one of which was a spectacular one by Dwyer. Gray's defense was the best defense that Technology could muster. On several corner kicks Technology's team came within inches of scoring, but Northeastern's goalie was always on the watch. Venture, Sparre, and Howard were Northeastern's best forwards.

First Period
At the opening of the period Northeastern got hold of the ball and worked it down the field. Sampson kicked it out, but Northeastern's Gray got it away from him and Betts put it away from the other end of the field. This happened several times until one of the Northeastern forwards kicked the ball behind his own goal. Burton kicked the ball from the goal line and Baroudi kicked a corner kick to the other end of the field. From here the ball was in Technology territory. Throughout most of the period the huskies worked the ball down the field time and time again. Period ended with the score 1-0.

Second Period
Northeastern men and women worked it down the field and time and time again, it looked as if Northeastern was going to take the lead. Just when the Huskies thought they had the lead, the ball was in Technology territory. After many attempts to score, finally one was scored by Peter Kirwin. During this period the right wing of Technology was always on the watch. Venture, Sparre, and Howard continued to kick Technology's team into the goal tender's hands. After 15 minutes in the second period the ball was down the field. This time it looked as if Technology was going to score, but Northeastern's men and women worked it down the field. Finally, one more attempt was made to score, but the ball was blocked by the goalkeeper. Northeastern scored again. During this period the right wing of Technology was always on the watch. Venture, Sparre, and Howard continued to kick Technology's team into the goal tender's hands. After 15 minutes in the second period the score was 3-0.
