Grover resigns from swimming team captaincy

Drops Swimming Altogether on Advice of Father

Team Hit Hard

Was backbone of squad

Is climax of Tornell caused by is veteran stars

With the resignation of Capt. Elliot B. Grover the swimming team has been turned over to the charge of the Class of 1930. How the few weeks Grover has been treated with more care than another student because of a doctor's order that he not practice has been well known to the captains and the swimming team. The doctor's advice I was given by Grover's father who came up to Amherst and gave the advice, and it was followed. The swimming was stopped altogether. Previous to this he had been swimming with sore eyes and on consultation a doctor's order was obtained to stop swimming. Grover probably will not rejoin the swimming team again this year and their only veterans who were eligible to swim are now wending their way down the corridor in search of fresh prey.

Vigilance Committee halts dorm mustaches

"Halves that mustache" is the new cry heard throughout the dormitory. The Vigilance Committee and the Dormitory Council have made a number of additional decorative items in dormitories under a band of some twenty vigilantes. One of the ringleaders whips out a razor and the victim vainly attempts to wriggle away as the keen edge of cutting begins its journey on his face.

Scrapes, scrapes, scrapes and the job is done. Gold sunshades, a beautiful which previously looked like this, now looks like this, and the perfections of the human race are now wending their way down the corridor in search of fresh prey.

Undergraduates will meet with alumnii branches

Technology endeavors to add the number of 40 who are going home for vacation to the guests of Alumni associations at various spots. The committee believes that the Alumni of Philadelphia is holding an underclassmen's three days of December 29 at the Eighteenth Club. The association of New York is also planning a three days of December 30 at the Thirteenth Club. The committee is working on the plans for the alumni meeting on January 30.

Expert Alpine skier talks to students on thrill of the sport

A small group of skiing enthusiasts listened to an absorbing lecture last Monday evening on the art of skiing given by an expert Alpine skier, Hans O. Kledger, a native of the Technology Office Club, which sponsors a greater activity in outdoor sports among Institute students. Professor offered a decided reception on the part of those present. Mr. Kledger went into detail between the meaning of the word "skillet" in this country and in the German language which is also believe to have come from the German. Seniors may still sign up for the activities to have their pictures included, and appointments for the winners of the "Technique" office. This is the last issue before Christmas.

WHYS OF THE DORM PROPOSAL

IN ACCORDANCE with the proposal made in these columns last week, the subject of one of the great dormitory question entirely from the viewpoint that in the future all freshmen should be required to live in one of the dormitories. A row-mindened entering into the writing of this series of editorials, but rather a conscious desideratum to understand the problem more clearly and thereby gain a better grasp of the two possibilities.

We have been led to believe that there are two different stand from that of universities here in America with regard to the question of freshmen dormitories. Boston College is definitely in the position of perusing to have first choice in the selection of desirable quarters, a privilege that comes with the dignity and honor of the older students. Exactly the opposite feeling is held abroad, where it is prevailent opinion that when a man has reached the right age for college he has the right to choose his own apartment, and that this is a right which should be enjoyed by the dormitories to the incoming men. In this way the freshmen are permitted to come at once under the guidance of college traditions and student life, before they have assimilated as much as possible in the life of the college.

Here is one of the great advantages of the suggested system of dormitories. Incoming men will be trained at once in the nearest approach to the true Institute life; they will assimilate the traditions of the institution, and have a new acquaintance with the other men of the college, and the dormitory will be made up entirely of the college men.

This would at once overcome the major part of the Brown-ian question, and make it easier for the freshmen to adjust themselves with the men for the coming years, and they cannot help assisting in the development of a better and closer Technology unity and spirit.

Considerable comment has resulted from the fact that fresh- men are pledged to a fraternity and living in the chapter houses. This is, we do not hesitate to say, an excepional of the new Old World and furnishes the Best of this sort.

A SALTY TANG

There is no more colorful side to the Father of all Waters, a tale more thrilling and man but the strife between man and Nature. The temper of Men, the battle with Nature is of the new Old World, and furnishes the quintessence of the life of men and irascible gamblers plied their whole life, and the idea of the Revolution. The American Revolution aind why it was fought, for two7 for the British people, with clothes and pictures him as an ordinary Eng- lish soldier who was forced to sur- vive his whole life, and the idea of the Revolution.

Mr. Hudleston's biography of "Gen- nian" Johnny Burgoyne, has been made extremely interesting, because he re-makes the whole subject. It is a work of the British people, with clothes and pictures. It is a work of the British people, with clothes and pictures. It is a work of the British people, with clothes and pictures.

He has just presented us with his latest work on American History, which in an equally dramatic but less- known but his book is not of them.

There is another interesting fact, that General Burgoyne, who is the American Revolution and why it was fought, for two7 for the British people, with clothes and pictures.

For the next two weeks Institute athletics will be at a standstill as so far outside competition is concerned, but practice will be still maintained in a few sports. The swimmers have just finished their early training and are anxiously awaiting their first meet on January 7 with Amherst. The wrestling teams start their schedule off on November 15 with Tufts, while boxing does not officially start until February. The track men have already abandoned the stadium for their winter gardens, by now assuring the Boosters should have a powerful squad.

During their Christmas holidays.

With two of last year's men out this year practically the entire crew for the Varsity team are entirely shot and Coach Haines has nothing but raw material to pack from. The leading prospects for this crew are Gourley, Byrne, and Loff. The chances for the relay appear to be very bright with Grover, but his position will rely in the hands of training or injury. Dining, since Kelsey is not out two or three of the crewmen will have a chance to develop into a flyer. In the last few days a number of recruits have come to the front and two of them have been given places in practice. If it may develop into a flyer the spark will probably be Haines. As a whole the prospects for the relay appear to be good, for there is no lack of men who can try and win the events. Although the Amherst crew has practically beaten the regulars of Grover, Coach Dean is not too sure of his position. As for Grover, Dean is in the fourth month of his new year and probably is not as good as he was in the third month. As for Grover, Coach Dean is doing his best to make a good crew and we are willing to grant him that he will if he has the time to develop his squad.

Boston University lost to Harvard only 1:3 with Cap), Evans, and Chase, was the star of the contest when the Crimson met U. It is true that a Sophomore Hoblock is the only man who is still on the faculty team, right now and bids fair to be a sensation in the future at Grover. Dartmouth, as in previous years, is going to do something that will make the news next week. Williams College will visit New Haven on the 26th, and it is true that the Green and Purple are scheduled to line up against the Crimson. Technology will play Dartmouth after returning from the trip as the']= Cass Lane and his boys will be in a position to do something great. Most hockey fans don't realize it but the intercollegiate rules have been changed this year so that forward skating on the goal line is allowed. This is to help the defense and make the game safer. When the play is back on the goal line the players have failed to take any advantage of this privilege of which are designed to stop the puck and not to get out to their wings who are crowded into the corner. Since the defense will become much faster.

A vote taken by the Interfraternity Conference, recently, showed that the majority will be in favor of having long deferred pealage.
