As We Like It

"THE LAST HOUR"—COPELEY THEATRE

The mysterious "slumber" scene which two rival armies wage a grim battle of wits in "The Last Hour" is a sinister device whose possibilities immediately awaken a scene of humorous and farcical proportions. The characters are lively and the direction engrosses the audience more through the strain and suspense created than through the farcical "slumber" scene. The plot deals with the efforts of Prince Nicholas, played by Mr. Ernest Dolge, to keep his fiancée, also played by Miss Carolyn Humphrey, from the dreaful Alliance of Plunder. The architect of the Alliance, played by Mr. Charles F. Scudder, is a thoroughly convincing plotters and one of the cleverest satires on the "dearn" enemies of the Alliance. The main problem is to get the Prince out of the Hotel Lincoln, which has been turned into a hospital. The plot turns around the Prince's attempts to get out of the Alliance of Plunder, and his efforts are thwarted by a series of complications which finally result in his being rescued by a heroine who is the only one capable of saving him. The plot is a thoroughly enjoyable one, and the farcical scenes, which are the chief attraction of the play, are thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. The play is a rare example of a thoroughly enjoyable satirical play, and the farcical scenes, which are the chief attraction of the play, are thoroughly enjoyed by the audience.
