BEAVERS ENTERED ...

Varsity and Freshman Football Men To All Events in Competition ... legitimate interest in the campus at the Institute which represents and serves the interests of students, faculty, and staff. It publishes a weekly newspaper, The Tech, which is distributed throughout the university campus and in the greater Boston area. The Tech serves as a platform for students to express their views on issues relevant to the university community and beyond. It covers a wide range of topics, including campus events, sports, and news from the surrounding area.

The Tech is an important part of the university's public relations efforts, as it provides a forum for students to share their perspectives and experiences. It also serves as a source of information for the university administration, as it can provide feedback and insights into student sentiments and concerns.

The Tech was founded in 1870 and has been in continuous publication ever since. It has a long history of promoting student involvement and activism, and has played a significant role in shaping the university's culture and identity.
INSATIABLE JUNIORS

In this world of constant change and reorganization there are men sufficiently interested in progressiveness to criticize with definite aims and purposes in mind, and there are men who criticize out of lobom immune tendencies. Within the Institute student body there is no small number of men who fall under the latter category, especially as regards the choice of orchestras for the annual Junior Prom. It is an unfortunate circumstance that men sometimes cannot quite comprehend things which are being done for their own interests. The Junior Prom Committee has gone to great efforts to make this year's occasion different and distinctive from those of years before. The acquisition of two orchestras is an admirable achievement, but the fact that their names have not been written all over radio programs is a severe blow to some students, and some degree that they immediately take it for granted that they are being cheated.

In the world of progress, it is impossible for the Junior Prom Committee to escape the criticism of the few, but the few men who criticize out of ignorance are doing the world a favor. The Junior Prom has been the highlight of the Tech's social program, and it is of utmost desirability that it continue to hold its high position. It seems absurd to argue that two orchestras of the type selected are not better than the program selected for this year in the style of music, continuous dancing, and the uniqueness, at least for the Institute, of having two distinct organizations play a program. It is impossible for the Institute of Technology to make the Prom of the Class of 1932 a greater success than any preceding it.

The present committee deserves every commendation for the correctness of its endeavors, and the fact that it has had the courageous originality to depart from Institute tradition seems to indicate that the result of its labors will be all that it is intended to be.

HELL

For many members of the undergraduate body, this week has been none too pleasant, since a great number of the fraternity initiations have been conducting their initiations. Granted that an intensive program of physical torture can be put to some advantage, there exists a decided overemphasis in these and similar proceedings.

At the Interfraternity Conference in New York late last fall, the matter of eliminating "hell week" from initiations was brought up as a great order. It is rather surprising, however, that many reforms and substitutions have been suggested. However, the old order is still in existence, and the neophyte still must assume the moniker.

The statement has been made that the program of a strenuous initiation may be at a value to the initiate, especially in the seniors see it. Moreover, it is argued, the "common myth" of initiation is preferable, since those who then remain in the Temple may spread the word on the site of its growth, and thus the concept of the "common myth" will continue to be spread. The value of the "common myth" is unknown to the initiate, who must assume the moniker of the seniors who Eurocacade.

There is a greatest desire of every fraternity to impress the value of the organization upon the entering underclassmen, and a common myth is the simplest and most effective means of accomplishing this aim to some extent. Nevertheless, a much greater impression might be made upon the underclassmen with a series of systematic introductory activities, which should satisfy the need for some system of initiation, and at the same time, would be no distraction of the underclassmen's attention from the main object of his being there--the school itself.

Mesuring thirteen-tenths of an inch across the cover, the smallest book ever produced by American book manufacturers is the "American Foun- ders' Memorial" of 1931, which contains a facsimile reproduction of the city of Chicago, Illinois, 1837. The book is a miniature edition of Lib- rary Illustrations, a book published in 1837, and a table of contents, facsimiled by the use of typeset all in legible form. It is small- er than a postcard and bound in a case of gold. The book is the official record of the Chicago Historical Society, and was received in gold.

The book is produced by the Training Division of the Ringhaps Press from type faces for the book of the American Library. The book is the first in a series of such books for the American Library. The book is the first in a series of such books for the American Library.

An article in the Reveille, under graduate newspaper of the Louisiana State University, declares that of all types of cigarettes on the campus, the Chesterfield and at the same time, the most popular is the end, is the so-called "best-selling" type.
The Miller Drug Co.
336 to 340 Washington Street, Boston

The Tech

Jack Summers Wins U.S. Championship

Retains Title Against Field Of Twenty-Three Players

(Continued from Page One)

That had made him champion in 1939 and had insured his place in the ranks of professional stars. He had made the most of his opportunity and had executed some fine points to win the championship.

The battle continued for two hours and twenty-three minutes. The champion was successful in evening the score at two all in the first game before Jack gained a 3-1 lead. However, Pope could not be stopped and had succeeded in evening the score at two all in the next game. Jack, once more, had to face a two-all tie. But he had succeeded in pulling ahead and had gained the lead in the final game.

The champion had shown a remarkable ability to keep his opponent off balance. He had managed to keep his opponent off balance and had gained the lead in the final game. He had succeeded in evening the score at two all in the next game. Jack, once more, had to face a two-all tie. But he had succeeded in pulling ahead and had gained the lead in the final game. He had succeeded in evening the score at two all in the next game. Jack, once more, had to face a two-all tie. But he had succeeded in pulling ahead and had gained the lead in the final game.

The champion had shown a remarkable ability to keep his opponent off balance. He had managed to keep his opponent off balance and had gained the lead in the final game. He had succeeded in evening the score at two all in the next game. Jack, once more, had to face a two-all tie. But he had succeeded in pulling ahead and had gained the lead in the final game. He had succeeded in evening the score at two all in the next game. Jack, once more, had to face a two-all tie. But he had succeeded in pulling ahead and had gained the lead in the final game. He had succeeded in evening the score at two all in the next game. Jack, once more, had to face a two-all tie. But he had succeeded in pulling ahead and had gained the lead in the final game. He had succeeded in evening the score at two all in the next game. Jack, once more, had to face a two-all tie. But he had succeeded in pulling ahead and had gained the lead in the final game.