1934 WINS AGAIN

It's cold, but it's customary. The winning cox takes his annual dousing.

The Sophomore tug-a-war team pulls away to a easy victory over Freshmen beef in two straight pulls. Note the facial expressions.

The Sophomore ball carrier at the extreme right seems to be taking some rough handling from a Freshman tackler. 1934 won 7-0.

In a Field Day marked for its docility the Glove Fight brought one of the most unexpected quarters. This is a fair cross section of what was going on all over.

See the expression on that annoyed person lying prone in the left foreground. The Sophomores won the glove fight for the first time since its inauguration.

Bell breasted the tape almost a half a lap ahead of his opponent and completes a record run for Field Day relay races.

An interested spectator, President Cushing.

The Freshmen and Sophomore crews on the starting line provide a novel silhouette against the morning sun.

As We Like It

Plymouth

In three acts of wonderfully-staged drama, the Profession Power opened a month's engagement of "The House Beautiful" at the Plymouth Monday evening. Depicting the mature life of Archibald and Jennifer Davis from the beginning of the nineteenth century down to the present, the play shows the Golden Rule integrity of Archibald during the gradual growth of his ideal and the small town he has chosen as a home. Presented on a revolving stage that expanded many times during the evening, the acts took off any one it has been our privilege to see before, the scenes were changed with a rapidity that added much to the pleasure of watching the play.

The death of Archibald, which occurs in the last act, realises that his passing is a mere transition and that the two will pass on to their idealised lover and their ideals.

James Bell, as Archibald, gives a fine interpretation of the modern Goshen, while Mary Phillips ably backs him as Jennifer, his wife. They are supported by an excellent cast. — D. H. C.

Colonial

"Tomorrow and Tomorrow," at the Colonial, provides an evening's entertainment of good acting of what seems to be a rather mediocre play. Taking the part of the professor who visits at the home of the Redman, recognises that he and Mrs. Redman "are made for each other," and then returns to the last act to care the reader how their love, Glen Arbor, gives the best performance.

Boo Johnson, as love, the wife of Gail Redman, closely follows him and gives a good rendering of the fashions which he lacks something to keep her interested in life. The better part of her work was in the first act. Harvey Stephens, playing the part of Celia, excels in the romantic interest of the young business man who is intensely interested in one of his many eligible sisters. It may be difficult to give good interpretations of children, but even so we thought the part of Christian Redman poorly done.

$1500 NEEDED IN DRIVE TO SECURE FUND S FOR T.C.A.

Campaign Ends at 6 P.M.

With only twenty-five hours to go, the drive to secure funds for the Technology Christian Association looked over 80000 in making its goal of $8000 at 5:30 o'clock tonight.

At that time the total needed in the campaign was $1815.00. As in past years the members of fraternities have given more than the other students. The Phil Beta Kappas have given an average of $11.00 per man.

No Re-Sell Solicitation This Year

At this time a year ago the amount collected was 28000, which was 78000 of the budget. The deficit was made up largely by mail contribution which came in late. Because of the organization, mail contribution was not employed this year.

Pittsfield Ability to be sold are being made every effort to obtain contributions today in order to make the drive a success. Students who have applied to sell drive but have not been personally approached may make their contributions to the drive in the Main Lobby or at the T.C.A. office.

Fall Concert Again

TODAY, after a lapse of many years, the Combined Musical Clubs of the Institute are presenting their Fall Concert and Dance. Dropped from the list of Musical Club activities eight years ago, the Fall Concert appears again this year in the response to a plea made by Professor Robert E. Rogers that the Clubs again have such a concert to build up a closer relationship between the students and the Institute in a recreational way. For many years the undergraduate body at Technology has had a chance to see and hear the Musical Clubs only during the academic term, and on a limited number of occasions the annual Christmas Concert and Dance, and the regular Spring Concert and Dance. Theorchestra group regularly makes a tour of the clubs of the Institute but year by year such appearances were made, some of which were with musical organizations from other colleges. This year the number of activities has been increased to include the Fall Concert and Dance tonight, as well as the annual classes of classics have been added before the students in previous years. The Fall Concert of Tomorrow is a forerunner of a feature event that differs from the usual evening's recreation. During the earlier part of the evening the various capable members of the combined group render selections, and later the Technicians play for dances. In a single evening one attends the concert of the musical organization at Technology and the Technicians at the same time as the combined better known Student Union. The revival of the Fall Concert and Dance this evening deserves the appreciative attention of all from a feeling of charity, although a fall. Combined Clubs as a self-supporting organization depends on the presentation of concerts to meet expenses, but because it is an evening of enjoyable entertainment at a Technology function.

Workout Machines Scheduled for Winter Training

Unless forced by inclement weather to remain indoors, all the crews will continue to practice in 2002. The winter workout morning breakfast before the next workout is planned. According to the record, the varsity crew has been holding up its end with its training in the field for the last few days. The team has been trying to get all the men in shape for the Harvard meet. This crew is trained for regular workouts on the oxing machine. The best crew has enough machines to accommodate about 20 men at one time. It is in this manner that the men are able to keep in trim throughout the winter when the river is not very enticing to even the hardiest of Bill Haines' crewmen.

In fact, this is the third week in a row that drill has been held to try to get the team in shape for the season. This meet was due to start in the first period, as soon as the relays were finished. The men will then be eligible to score. Tomorrow, the men will have to cover all the events, to cover every department of the sports, to give all men a good start.
