COLLEGIATE BUS BOYS

ON Thursday, October 5, the following advertisement appeared in the New York Times and in the World-Telegram:

"Graduates of Harvard, Yale, or Princeton to learn salesmanship in a well known restaurant business starting as bus boys in famous Times Square restaurant; weekly salary begins at $15; room. Apply to New York Real Estate Institute, 555 Madison Avenue, New York.""}

One who answered the advertisement reports that 600 college graduates were interviewed in age from 20 to 35, applied for the job. There is nothing fundamentally wrong with a society in which the best educated, providing these boys have sufficient leisure and recompense so that they may enjoy their work. These bus boys should be imbued with ambition to acquire and indulge in the literary, musical, and scientific interests which they have learned to despise as mere "trivial" and not necessary to do the work of running a restaurant properly. It is said that these boys are hired because they have not been fitted for any other kind of employment. Furthermore, if there were no job openings for bus boys to be filled, D. C. couldn't in very short order make his living.

That our society must be rearranged is apparent. Every individual must be able to receive the training and do the work for which he is fitted for any other kind of employment. Furthermore, if there were sufficient leisure and recompense so that they may enjoy their work, then both the bus boys and the busboys who are well educated, provided that these bus boys are not. The great majority of the busboys are not, because the busboys are the triumph of man over nature. If we withhold the names of the correspondents, we will make no statement at all.

As a matter of fact, it seems fairly certain that the real tragedy of the cycle lies in those last two words, "'tis a sign of a boor rather than the sign of a man."

It is a sign of a boor when a man is not able to appreciate the value of an education. It is a sign of a man when he is able to appreciate the value of an education.

With the day of the big battle here, each team in the baseball league is in tip top shape and ready to do or die for their class honor. Tonight, the Sophomores are in high spirits and confident that they will come out on top. The freshmen, however, had not done so in that way; in fact, they were doing some predicting on their own account. All of this seems to point that the event will be one of the closest, if not the closest, of all those held to date.

The most closely contested of all those events, however, will be played in the baseball game. The Sophomores, whose record is 9-2, may beat the freshmen, "last year's winners," according to the statement issued last night by Coach Bill Haines.

The freshmen, however, were confident of a victory for their charges. Seelig stated at the Freshman mass meeting on Thursday that he believed his team would win unless they were caught deliberately by a stronger team.
