Brother Alpha

We finally landed at the 3rd Avenue Station, where we de- scended into the Walker Men's Athletic building. Brother Alpha was there, along with several other members of the Alpha. We were greeted with a rush of warm air, as we entered the gymnasium. The lights were already on, and the sound of music filled the air. A large group of people were gathered, and Brother Alpha was standing at the center, addressing the crowd.

Suddenly, a loud noise came from outside. Everyone turned to look outside, and saw a large steam train pulling up to the station. The conductor announced, “We are about to leave for the next station.”

“Brother Alpha,” I said, “I’ve heard stories about your adventures. Will you tell us about your travels?”

“I will,” he replied, “but first, let me show you something.”

He took out a small book, and opened it to a page with an illustration of a steam engine. “This is how the steam engines work,” he said, “and this is how we power our ship.”

“And what about the steam tables?” I asked.

“Ah, the steam tables,” he said, “those are like a map for our ship. They tell us how much steam we need to power the engine, and when we need to add more or less water.”

I looked around the gymnasium, and saw that everyone was listening intently. Brother Alpha was a natural leader, and everyone was eager to learn from him.

“Do you have any questions?” he asked.

“Can you tell us about your adventures?” someone in the crowd asked.

“I have traveled all over the world,” Brother Alpha said, “from the steam-powered ships of the 1800s, to the modern steam engines of today. I’ve seen it all.”

The gymnasium erupted in applause, and Brother Alpha continued to talk about his adventures, until it was time for the next meeting. We all left feeling inspired, and eager to learn more from Brother Alpha’s travels.

After the Dance

"Ah," said the young lady, looking up with her eyes. "Do you know everything about the fine things of the world?"

We drifted elegantly, arm in arm, to the punch bowl, brimming with its Flapper, punch, just as I contented myself and the sound of that voice lingered melodiously in my ears, I seemed to hear the murmur of a sea, an entire fragrant potion. VI-A Men Spend Time at Game of Sea Battles

Course VI-A is reputed to be one of the newest in the Institute which requires a large amount of time to study. However, we have heard of one case where two of them had nothing to do but play a game called sea battles.

Each of the contestants marks out for himself a square of one hundred compartments, some of which he calls boats, and marks them off. The other admiral does likewise.

In an hour and a half order that the opponent may exchange volleys at random, attempting to hit the ships which are so marked. On the basis of the number of hits and misses, the score is marked on the board.

The victory is obtained only when all the boats are sunk. Each contestant has six attempts. The one with the most victories is declared the winner of the game. The rules of the game are quite simple.

Why

You say Chesterfields are not like other cigarettes.

Chesterfield Cigarettes are made of tobacco, wrapped in paper, and they may look alike; but that doesn't mean that they are alike. Chesterfield Cigarettes are not like other cigarettes. The tobacco is not like the tobacco used in other cigarettes. It is mild, ripe—not harsh, or strong.

Then again, Chesterfields taste better. They are seasoned in the right way with the right kind of Turkish tobacco. There is nothing flat or tasteless about them.

You're telling me “They Satisfy”!
