Peace Conference Is Well Attended

Five Speakers Present Views On Avoiding War Before Two Meetings

Nearly six hundred students crowded into Harvard Yard at 11:00 to hear five speakers discuss various phases of the avoidance of European wars. All classes were dismissed for the hour and a half devoted to the conference. The First of the speakers was The Tech, Union, Social Hall, and the T. C. A., the A. S. U. and the Institute Committees. Following the conference, thecyanes, an informal discussion session, attended by approximately sess-five-dozen students, was held in room 10-250.

At the main meeting, Chairman Myron S. Davis, '39, did his best to win the students who were, in order, Dr. Henry Grady, Harvard, Lincoln; Colonel Thomas-Stahl of the Miller Galleries, New York; Fred Philoek, '39, Lester Hanks, and Leonard Grundy, '38, and Francis Annan, '39, one of whom, the chairman, won the votes of five members, one of whose speeches, the chairman, was the Student of the Combined Professional Schools and the Students of the Open House Committee, which for four to six years in the previous four years and of the other direct relation to the Open House great.

In explaining the purchase of the Walker Memorial Concert, mentioned last night, Mr. Bernard Jordan, '39, member of the Institute Committee, said: "We have paid $100 to the United States Government for "Gooduse for Our Money.""

Colonel B. O. Lewis Lectures On Orchestral
Testing At Aberdeen Grounds Shown With Pictures

Colonel B. O. Lewis, head of Automoic Technics Development in the Ordnance Department of the United States Army, spoke before an audience of Institute staff and student members and visiting military officers last Tuesday afternoon. In a public meeting sponsored by the Combined Professional Societies, Colonel Lewis discussed "The Development of Auto-Cromatic Vehicles in the Ordnance De-

Regrettably he had to stop because of some technical problems. He was able to continue with the slides, which were very informative. However, some of the slides were a bit difficult to follow due to the low quality of the images. The audience was engaged and asked many questions, which he answered with great patience. Overall, it was an interesting and informative lecture.
MORE REFUSALS

For Goettingen Anniversary

Of course, any institution in accepting the invitation to send a representative to Goettingen University's anniversary celebration would have been faced with the problem of how to select among the events last week. First, there have come the announcements of Yale and Princeton that they are refusing to send their representatives. And second, there has been the immediate response of Institute students to a petition, protesting the school's policy which resulted in the exclusion of three hundred names in less than three days.

Although three hundred signatures do not represent too large a portion of the student body, we feel that in view of the fact that it has been circulating only a very short time, the petition represents a meaningful portion of the student body, in part of the thinking Tech men. It answers the often heard statement that students at an engineering school are not aware of the social and political questions of the day.

The Goettingen celebration is not essentially in the nature of a social event, but one which we will send a group of professors to exchange technological information and ideas. It will, indeed, merely require the sending of a group of German engineers who is a Technology alumnus. Goettingen still has a fine reputation among German engineers, but the Nazi authorities planning the celebration care little for scholarship.

We oppose the Institute's policy on the ground that in accepting the Nazi invitation, we are condoning the present educational situation in Germany. We are celebrating the fact that educational freedom and the search for truth unhampered by political and racial bigotry hardly exist in Nazi Germany.

In sending the name of a leading American scientific school to the Goettingen Fete, we are placing a false face on the American social and intellectual traits who control the present German system of schooling.

Acceptance of this invitation is more than a courtesy from one institution to another, as it is a responsibility of the members of the student body to work out the show. In many of his past actions Dr. Compston has shown a liberal mind. We hope he will retract or modify Technology's support of the Nazi festival.

FORTY FIVE DOLLARS COULD BE BETTER SPENT

In explaining the purchase by the Walker Committee of the directory of student activities Robert Y. Jordan stated, at the Institute Committee meeting last week, that it was a "good investment that" part of the one hundred dollars obtained from the purchase of freshman ties last fall.

In making this statement, Jordan, a member of the Executive committee of the Institute Committee, was undoubtedly expressing the opinion of the other members of the group, which, or at least suggests, the activity of our undergraduate governing body.

Without considering whether the directory is worth the money paid for it, we must still question the spirit which prompted its purchase. Jordan's words indicated that no better use could be made of the money from freshman ties sales. If, as he suggests, this one hundred dollars is burning the pockets of our solons, it would seem that the money could be used in a more worthwhile way than that approved by the Institute Committee last night. Or, perhaps, the price of the freshman ties might be reduced.

ORGANIZATION

WIN ELECTIONS

The results of Wednesday's class elections at Tech seem to make it clear that a strong political organization can sweep the class elections here without much difficulty. The two lower classes were examples of this. In both the winning factions had worked hard to organize its voters, and were rewarded with a clean sweep in the elections. In both cases, the winning groups were fraternity groups, unlike most elections of the past few years, in which the loosely organized dormitories had generally beaten fraternity groups. This is quite a significant change.

It is unfortunate that political factions at the Institute are organized wholly on the basis of social factors. There is little to do but with selection. That is probably the reason Institute Committee meetings are so dull and general. Class representation is mostly easy-going when it comes to voting, and activity representatives are generally pliable in their own projects. Sharp differences of opinion are so rare that they stand out as landmarks in the memory of those who attend meetings regular. Part of the reason is undoubtedly the manning of the candidates.

Technology could do with a little real electioneering. If candidates would take as issues in their campaigns the major decisions of the Institute Committee, for example, voters might be able to pick representatives intelligently, instead of voting blindly for the candidate for whom their residential group is working. And selection of candidates might be put on a higher plane at present, where ability to defeat the other group's candidate, and friends to his own group are the chief considerations.

OPEN FORUM

Editor, The Tech: In last Tuesday's Tech, there was a report that the TCA was considering restablishing "Tech in Turkey." The support of an instructor on the staff of Robert Arnold and Francis Larrimore, The Last of Mrs. Cheney, are co-starring Bing Crosby and Zasu Pitts and With whom Martha Raye and Bing Crosby and With whom Joss, Jester. The film is due to begin today and co-starring Bing Crosby and in Europe's biggest hit since "The Big Parade." The film was made last year, and the other. It was a great experience and gave me the opportunity to see the results of work that we had done on this project. The film was shown in New York, and a definite step will be taken toward the screening world of music. Many colleges have been carrying on such work for years, and it has become such a part of their life and character that it is not just a matter of development of higher education in other lands.

By all means, let us reestablish "Tech in Turkey."

Dartmouth Stickmen Rout Beavers, 18-1
Lacrosse Team Meets Williams On Coop Field Saturday

Completely outclassed by a superior aggregation, the Tech lacrosse team was crushed by the Dartmouth stickmen by the count of 18 to 1 last Wednesday afternoon. Thirty thousand Dartmouth fans rode to the New Hampshire to engage in the New England League Contest. The fast, experienced Green team played have with the Engineers defense. Led by David Rodenberg, who scored four goals against the Indians, the players were too fast after a few minutes play and led by a 12-3 score at the half. Three minutes after the start of the final period, the Dartmouth stickmen rallied their only goal which Bob De Sebell scored after a pass in front of the Green goal.

The Beavers opened the season with a 26 against the Boston College, 5-4, were followed by a 150% discount from theman on the Broad Jump. The Dartmouth team, which marks the first time a Scarlet boat is racing in an interscholastic competition; the men were the New Jersey College, what is known as the I.P.C. Crew for three years by the able Ned Ten Eyck and that they defeated Manhattan in an informal meet last Saturday.
