SATURATION POINT OF LECTURES

Last issue in an editorial we reached a conclusion that now appears to be erroneous. We then believed that large lecture rooms would not be continuously supported by the student body, and that in the future, the lecture rooms in 10-250 can hardly be supported.

It is no doubt that there is a saturation point, and that lecture rooms cannot be filled completely. There is a definite scarcity of good seats five minutes before the hour of the lecture.

A more correct conclusion, about the maximum number of such lecture halls, would deal with the number of good speakers who can be brought to Technology, as it is fairly evident that students are going to go to the best lecturers regardless of the amount of time they have spent attending lectures during the last few weeks.

PERMANENT EVEN ARTIFICIAL SKATING RINK

Apparently there seems to be no doubt in the minds of the authorities that the expense incurred in the construction of a skating rink does not compare with the benefit and good it will do the health and well being of the students at Technology. Good health cannot be evaluated in terms of dollars and cents.

During the winter athletic activities are limited to indoor sports. Exercise in the open air is not available except to students who have the necessary shoes and transportation facilities to enable them to reach a skating rink or a toboggan slide. Some type of winter sport should add much to the campus.

The main objection to building a rink is the uncertainty that the rink will be a success. The land on the campus is not adaptable to a temporary rink, and weather forecasts in the winter, although favorable, are not sufficiently reliable.

If money is invested in a permanent rink, the absence of snow will make the rink more the exception than the rule, and artificial refrigeration would be resorted to.

SCIENCE IN BRIEF

By ARTHUR M. YORK, '35

Rainbows at Night

Lunar rainbows are observable so infrequently that it is well known that a clear observer in the United States would see the phenomenon not more than once in 20 years. Reasons why rainbows are not often caused by the light of the moon include the fact that (1) the moon is much dimmer than the sun, (2) the moon’s light is disturbed, (3) rainbows are more likely to be observed by the human eye if the sun is shining, but the moon is in the sky, and (4) the moon is the condition (still or nearly steady) and position favorable to the production of a bow only on the average of one day in ten.

Stabilization by Light

After about five years of extensive research, an ultraviolet ray lamp has been produced which seems to be practical as a means of sterilization from bacteria. The “sterilization lamp” as it is called, is inexpensive to operate and can be used effectively to sterilize foods, cooking utensils, feed, and even the air. It is claimed that the lamps are 99.99 per cent effective and do not cause irritation in the eyes. (Science 78: 269-270.)

Marriage and “Swine”

It is said that large numbers of “swine,” bad players and multihand gents who also dislike the light of the moon, are entering the dormitory. The result is a much higher than normal score of student infections. This condition is due to the fact that the dormitories are in the middle of the campus, and the weather is not so good as in the city.

“Quaint” Rattles

Metallic powder in a material from which “quaint” machine heads are made, results in some interesting effects. Some results in the manufacture of such an object are to be expected, and when the temperature of the heating element, as a result of the oil present in the wire, is lowered, the sound created is of a much higher pitch.

Harvard '41 Win Over Rosenheim
Both Teams to Play Tonight Against University of St. Andrews

With the enthusiastic cheers of a large crowd, the crimson basketball team (their own basketball team walked in from the other door) opened the annual gala on Sunday afternoon at the New GYM with a 39-13 victory over the Rosenheim team, which had not yet played even the first round, but which, according to the tournament schedule, is slated to be won by Harvard. The Rosenheim team called a "time-out" after a 12-7 Harvard lead in the first half, but the game continued for another ten minutes. The Harvard team called a "time-out" again in the middle of the second half, and a five-point lead was lost, but the Rosenheim team called their last "time-out" and the game finished just before Christmas vacation began.

The Harvard players were led by Chipman, who scored two of the six points scored by Harvard in the first half, and again in the middle of the second half.
