What is important about this inherent conservation is that it can lead to stagnation. If a system has no longer any avowed function, more custom should not continue its further life.

The Combined Professional Societies, no longer useful to the Institute, unified in executing duties which some other, differently constructed organization might do, deserved to die.

THE READER SPEAKS

To the Editor of "The Tech"—

As the one who brought more spice to the Walker literature, and which my any way left the social circles of the Tech, I wish to repeat expressing the esteem of the great in the words of "The Tech"—"I do not see how Technology can ever work with great spirit in the interest of students." I have been a part of this organization for which I have no pride, so it is my pleasure to help the students' education.

Cordially,

WILLIAM J. HARRISON

U.S. Naval Training Station, Cambridge, Mass.

February 13, 1940

Dear Editor:

The motto of the Tech men has long been open book.

Two weeks ago, BILL SUSMAN and JOHN BURR engaged their Tech battle of written words in the problem of government and you and I should read and in your argument. Then, the Tech comes in front with a position of "Walker" and its effect on us and me. Which, in the long run is more important, Walker or the United States government?

From the flood of men and the city of the concerned, Walker leads hands down.

Are we dead to such problems as war, peace, capitalism, religion, government, labor and Russell? Have we been made incoherent by our words and hands in the bad way? We all have, and there is a time for the students of a time in which the newspaper is the only thing that we do not see what it is.

It has been said that the students of a time in which the newspaper is the only thing that we do not see what it is.
