Track Coaches To Start Tonight On Briggs Field

By (Coach Dave) Frank

This afternoon at four o'clock, Joe McDonnell will fire his gun to open the 55th Annual New England Intercollegiate games on Briggs Field. During the spring many dual meets have been held to give the coaches a chance to see who should be in the lineup. These will continue by late afternoon about seventy-five events will have been completed and will be forced to watch the Saltair Invitational from the sidelines.

 fifteen events will be run off by five o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and it appears now, after studying the results of the dual meets held in the past two months, that Holy Cross shoules win again this year.

Tanya Performs At Beer Party

To present an interest in entertainment for student parties, Tanya, exotic dancer, performed at the annual Beer Party and Banquet of the Alpha Chi. E. S. held last night in Griggs Hall. Two numbers were given by the exotic dancer as part of the program.

LET THE DINGHIES RACE

 Appropriately it has been announced that the Field Day events next year will include a swimming meet. Combining a water polo game, a medley relay, and a free style relay, this takes advantage of the increased athletic facilities and will still retain the use of team competition.

Unfortunately, however, with the adoption of the swimming meet the dinghy race has disappeared. Although it is impossible to give a large number of events, the situation as it is would not be a happy one.

Ultimately, of course, the problem of what a man is going to get out of his curricular studies is an individual one. But if final examinations are not necessary--and in some instances somewhat less than half, then $10 tutoring sessions would lose much of their lure, and the lot of the "tutee" would be a futile one. Further addition of events would not be a happy one.

The Poll and Convoys

Editor, The Tech.

Dear Sirs:

The recent foreign policy poll conducted by The Tech stimulated editorial comment by you and also comment by readers. It seems to me that in some of these comments was much misunderstanding of certain conclusions which could be drawn from the figures which you obtained.

In your editorials you made reference to the 65% of the students who felt that America would be worse if Britain were to enter the war. It is interesting to note that this is the same percentage which you obtained in your poll in the fall. Some of the more illuminating speculations of this figure are the false sense of security which so many of us have acquired.

There were some other significant points which your figures bear out which I believe you ourselves overlooked. A surprising change in opinion regarding aid to Britain occurred this semester. At the beginning of the semester there appeared to be a certain complacency as to the problem, a drop occurred in the percentage of students desiring continued British aid. On the other side of the picture, 5.2% more students were in favor of war. Thus, what seems to be taking place is a split in opinion in favor of aid to Britain, 5.2% more students are in favor of war. This is the same percentage that was found in the fall. It seems to me that the belief that continuation of aid to Britain will result in a situation where the people of America is that the British will lose the war is not likely to be realized. But the indication is that there is a growing feeling that aid should be continued.

There were other interesting items which the poll brought to light. For instance, 15% more students are in favor of Britain's entering the war than was found in the fall. However, since the Debating Society has been the most inspiring teacher, few of his students are likely to be swayed by the results of this poll.

We think that this move has been wasted. The contribution of the swimming meet is nullified by the dropping of the sailing race. One of the main objects of Field Day should be to get as many different men by the large number of events. Princeton should be to get as many different men into the realm of lingering memory. Princeton is usually considered as a place where only the academic and water sports are considered. We think that this move has been wasted.
