Novel Airplane To Be Subject Of Professor Koppen's Lecture
To acquire students of aeronautics and graduate students to the most recent developments in the field of aeronautics as a result of the M.I.T. annual meeting held in a few days ago. A junior was selected to the lecture "On the Design of The Skyfarer" in the presence of Otto C. Koppen of the department of aeronautics. The lecture will be held at 5:00 P.M. tomorrow in Room 3270.

The Skyfarer is a new type of airplane, a large monoplane for the first time in the United States, and is placed in the conventional light airplane, with new features which will be very desirable to gymnastphiles.

Side By Side Instruction
Unlike most concept anorexia, the Skyfarer's pilot and passenger sit side-by-side, which allows in the opposite direction.

Step Right Up Boys

Friday night the Wellesley Junior Class presented to the annual Junior Show before a more-than-capacity house and received an ovation greater than that given many professional productions.

Produced on a bare shoestring, the show was allowed only the borrowed locale of the Tech Auditorium, and still it was a tremendous success, and the entire show was a spontaneous. In addition, all of the income from contributions at the door was allowed only to be spontaneous. In addition, all of the income from contributions at the door went to town as a result. The spirit that carried the show was the same spirit that one Tech Show after another has carried their own Tech Show, which died a natural death too long ago. However, the Tech Show went on because it was a show that the Tech student became too great and most of the leaders of the show invasibly transferred so other schools upon academic request.

Appropriately the Wellesley show has been able to avoid these difficulties, but we still wish, after seeing the Wellesley production, that we lived in less expensive times for the Tech Show at its peak. Record has it that one Tech Show played on Broadway for two weeks.

We extend our congratulations to the Wellesley Junior Class for its exception-ally fine show, in spite of the extremely nasty weather. It was a tremendous success, and the entire show was original from theme to finale.

This show brought forth many thoughts of the tale of the ten, that is the story of our own Tech show, which which died a natural death too long ago.
