Red Cross Asks Blood Donations By Institute Men

Technology students who wish to contribute blood to the blood banks, which are kept for the city's armed forces and for any conceivable civilian disaster, may do so under the program of the American Red Cross, it was announced by Dean Harold R. Lobel, last night.

10,000 units have been accepted as the quota for the Greater Boston chapter of the Red Cross. In connection with this it was explained that rigid standards are maintained for the donation procedure. Donors must be between 20 and 40 years of age and in good health. If the person遗弃 the donation, the entire procedure takes about 45 minutes and involves all effects.

Medical Department Cooperating

Dr. George W. Morse, director of the Institute Medical Department, stated that the department was cooperating with the Red Cross in the campaign and would furnish the prospective donors from Technology with information about their health from their records, the clinical physicists at the time. Since the actual taking of blood is performed only in regularly designated hospitals, the Medical Department will not do this, but will assist the Red Cross in the actual procedure.

Appointments for donations should be made in advance by telephone to the Red Cross headquarters at 27 Government Street, Boston. The number is 415-1030.

The Christmas spirit held forth through the month of December as several fraternal and residential groups threw open their doors to allow the underprivileged children from the Morgan and Ellis Memorial Foundations to file in.

Santa Claus himself was on hand to greet the youngsters as they filed in, they were of all races and colors. Most of the groups reported that they were well trimmed by the Student House members. They were of all ages and colors, and the true Christmas spirit held up through the evening.
