African Correspondent Sends Pictorial Evidence Showing Voo Doo Sabotage

Editors, The Tech

Walker Memorial Bldg., Cambridge, Mass.

Gentlemen:

Every American must be on the alert for detection and suppression of subversive activities. The enclosed picture—-our African correspondent recently sent a photographic report taken by the United States Army Officer in Africa, and figures in the charges brought on Voo Doo by The Tech.

From Africa came Lt. Col. Nelson's appeal, "This horrible influence, can't something be done about it," and to Col. Nelson this African debating society answered, "Yes, we can act. Voo Doo was not stamped out like the Japanese beetle and the German mumps."

Our problem was one that would have floored lesser valiant men. First we thought of allowing Voo Doo to stand upon its own legs and thus tatter and crumble to dust, but we were aware of the further consequence so common in vinerambrates of the lower orders, that those might regenerate from its sestonicious motor dust in its dank, humid, head-uppers, and recommence...

The Tech Will Observe Washington's Birthday

The Tech's publication schedule was planned prior to the Freedom's abolition of the Washington's Birthday Holiday next Monday, which will have no effect on Tech's publication. Thus, despite the fact that the Institute will not observe the birthday of the father of our country, The Tech will hold the day as a holiday in his honor.

Recalling from the pages of our illustrious predecessors on The Tech that once college was a refuge from the turmoils of the outside world, we can still be subduing only by exposure to the latent healthful air of public scrutiny which brooks no evil, we contemplated the result. Once exposed, Fuss subsided into a quiescent periodical which after our original plan in favor of another. To avoid this outcome we rejected Leslie M. Brindis, ’45 Vol. LXIII reprint it verbatim.)

Newspapers Have Gremlins, Too

—in case you hadn’t noticed

By a. C. P.

For the millions who are slightly play-minded, the discovery of the gremlin, those devilish little devils who mess things up for the flies at the top, as they have at least one of the major excitaments of the war. It is easier to believe in gremlins as in fantasists or leprechauns in any of the old days. The same applies to the pages of that fine Irish writer, Flannery O’Brien.

But gremlins were not enough. The alarm though sometimes exasperatingly exasperatingly and radiate radio industry have come forward with a new discovery. These are called gremlins.

One type of gremlin, for instance, is known by the copy of an article writer; another by his loftiness, factionalism, whatever. The flack makes noises in microphones. This gremlin will be sure to provide much merriment.

Scheduled Game With Tufs Tuesday Night

The M.E.T. hockey team took Swampscott Crescents into camp Wednesday night with a 9 to 3 win. The lineup was much changed from the team that clipped Bowdoin Univer- sity 7-2. Kane and Munroe were two of the names that were noticeably missing. Also the presence of Larry Buston, last year's freshman goalie, was evident in the facade of the team that supervised most of its experienced players.

An interesting fact about the game is that the manager and star for the Crescents was Lars Andersson, '26, a star on the hockey teams at Tech during his college days.

A new and improved method of aircraft identification was developed at Northwestern University's Civilian pilot training program and in managing editor of Press Magazine.

Best Yet
Dr. E. L. Edmondson, director of engineering at the University, also a former army air officer, said the new method is "the best yet devised for identifying aircraft." The technique has been used in aeronautics at the university and developed at Northwestern University's Civilian Pilot Training Program since 1942.

New Changes in Technical Journals
The technique is available to all technical writing, whether in technical journals or department of the army.
