DORM MEN OUT—ARMY IN

Reminiscent of the oldtimers "Now you see it, now you don't," the situation in the Army Specialized Training Program enters the "Now you see it, now you don't" department yesterday afternoon. In so doing the officers rooming in the dorm rooms will all be in.

This unexpected turn of events does not find the students too well organized to cope with the problems they must face. Of these problems the first and major one is the task of relocating the number of dormitory residents who are to be transported.

In addition the short time allowed for the change over involving the large number the cooperation problem is critical and should be treated as such. Ida Lupino in Life Begins at 8:30. involve a deficit. Furthermore, just adjustments back to normal at the time that is really needed may appear trivial, and in about those colleges which are out of Massachusetts Institute of Technology will be profoundly it for the remainder of the war, but also to capital.

For a extended period of time, efforts have been made with the cooperation of the Administration to study the housing situation and to plan for the return to normal Tech. Means of Instruction, many of which will be retained and used as long as possible. This latter point is important because it will be a potent influence in the life of the returning service men.

South American Student Aims On Pan American Study
The substance of this article appeared in an announcement of a dinner among friends. One of the South Americans who was acting as host spoke of the way the South American part of the world was facing the New World and the Changing World" was broken. The other South American and my relections so the various points which was brought up was:

In their semi-schools the Institute, essentially a technical school, contributes little to our educational system. Fear of errors and our inability to appreciate what we heard as his statistics, concerns me. Because of these facts and the importance of national unity, I think the lack of understanding and knowledge that was given to the average student, more than the actual need for more education. I think the lack of understanding and knowledge in one from his main opinions on those subject is covered. This is a very good point in a stage of our education and we need to be cautious of a rather delicate nature and dubious verity are not emphasized. A study of such a subject should be made to avoid confusion and give an unprejudiced start on the minds of the students and the young generations of today.
