French Ship Makes Courtesy Call and Elaborate Pageantry

PAYING a courtesy call to Boston today was a ship familiar to this town several days in advance by a sym- pathetic Boston press, and at the time of this writing, many hundreds of people were reading of the great ship to berth for the night.

A great reception on board was arranged for members of the press, and on this occasion, it was the press that found itself the subject of a complimentary reception, and New England press managements included Mayor Curley, State Treasurer P. J. Whelan of Boston. Attorney General Judge Nolen, and French Line’s Boston Agent Mr. F. Calle. These and many other eminent personalities were given the unique privilege of mounting the “De France.”

Elaborate Decorations

Giving up the brightly decorated quarters, your Tech report- er French hearts beat just a little faster to-night, knowing that French faces appear more at home in Continental Boston than in any other city. The French pressing tour of the ship revealed that even the ordinary decor of the quarters has had its recent decorating done over her face a pretty picture. The boy who wins the door prize to-day must do nothing less than justice to the ship’s luxury and fine taste used in transforming the three stags left the Columbia on Wednesday, due to the misjudgment of the driver. It happened at 3:20 p.m. exactly the same as done to either car or to person. It may be of interest to readers of the paper who are not acquainted with the intricacies of square dancing that they can have just as good a time dancing. Tickets for Oct. 5, 1949 at a price of $2.20 apiece from the NSA Committee.

The National Student Association will sponsor an intercollegiate dance this Friday evening in the basement of Furness. All the tickets will be held in the National Guard Armory on Massachusetts Avenue. Main feature of the dance will be the two guest groups. The company, consisting of the student body of the Naval Academy, will be in Westboro last Wednesday, began adventuresome and decided to take a ride down the turnpike, possibly on the way to Westboro. One of the group informed The Tech that they had intended to have the ride ended by the time they came back from their dormitories. However, they didn’t take a ride down the turnpike, possibly on the way to Westboro.

ECONOMICS

A few weeks ago Professor Paul A. Samuelson of our Department of Economics and Social Science, along with a group of economics professors from other colleges, submitted a report to Senator Paul Douglas, the freshman Democrat from Illinois. The report urged that Congress set up a sliding tax system, along with a national purchasing tax. The report followed a series of lectures given by the professors, along with a textbook by Samuelson.

Speaking in general, many natural scientists and engineers have a distrust of the social scientists and of economists in particular. This state of affairs exists primarily because the scientists are naturally disinclined to the philosophy of a "compensatory fiscal policy." At least in theory, this kind of policy would tend to attenuate the extremes of business activity. In spite of the fact that this theory is often confused with the idea that the state should own the means of production, Professor Samuelson's report will probably go the way of most recommendations to Congress, and we shall probably hear little, if anything, of such a tax policy for some time to come.

In a surprising upset, Tech's varsity soccer team went down to a 3-2 defeat at the hands of Pilot State Teachers' College last Wednesday afternoon. On the previous evening the Engineer freshmen opened their season by scoring twice in the first half, and the Beavers tied it up on a half, and the Beavers tied it up on a penalty shot and Jerry Austin put one into the nets. However, Pilot came back strongly after the intermission and scored three times in the last two minutes to cap the game and hand the Beavers their second defeat in as many games.

EATIONAL LIGHTS

In the Irregular game, the first to be played under the Stadium lights, B. U. scored first in the first half, and the Beavers tied it up on a goal by Mario Kornat with ten minutes remaining. Thereafter, and through two thrilling overtime periods, neither team was able to score, and the game was declared a tie. The final showed individual talent but still lack organization. Terry Randell scored twice toset the final score. The game is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon both the varsity and freshmen will tangle with Trinity College on the latter's field.

An illustration of the major phases of stage designing, the exhibit points out how the sets, props, costumes, and lighting must aid the actors and the action. The exhibit is entitled, "AN ARCHITECT SETS THE STAGE."
