Within this field of concentration, the student will have a choice of two different tracks, one leading to a bachelor's degree and the other leading to a master's degree. The student must choose one of these tracks from the beginning of their studies.

Undergraduate students are required to take a minimum of 120 credits to complete their degree. This includes at least 40 credits in the humanities, 40 credits in the sciences, and 40 credits in the social sciences.

The humanities requirements include courses in English, history, art history, music history, and literature.

The sciences requirements include courses in biology, chemistry, physics, and mathematics.

The social sciences requirements include courses in political science, economics, sociology, and psychology.

The exception to the above requirement is that students who choose to major in the sciences are required to take 60 credits in the sciences, 30 credits in the humanities, and 30 credits in the social sciences.

THE TECH

The Tech as we like it

RASHOMON

A detective story without a detective; only three settings; some first-rate acting by a small cast of five actors and an actress; a vivid impression of the action; original and well thought out; emphasis is on the manipulation and incidental music closely knit in rhythm and melody with the character of the action: this, in essence, is the technical achievement of Rashom on. It shows what can be done in a limited means, an idea, and imagination.

The scene: Kyoto City, the time: 1200 A.D. Three men are seeking shelter from a torrential downpour under the roof of Rashom on gate. Times have changed. A man has just died. Was he killed, or did he die by his own hand? The dead man's wife reports one story. A witness, another. A bandit, accursed of murder, tells another. The dead man, through the mouth of a monkey, produces a fourth.

The three beneath the gate are the judges. The audience are the judges. How did the man die? There are four versions. Which is correct? How much of the film director's knowledge of his own theories do we not possess? At any rate he was well aware that nothing is absolutely true. It was his basic idea. We are the subjective activities of the man in the film through sub- pressure of atmosphere, which was printed in THE TECH over fifty years ago, is most timely and yet distressing. That progress over a period of half a lifetime should be so slow here at MIT, is most unfortunate.

What's the matter? Doesn't the Institute offer enough activities to divert the student? Certainly it does. Doesn't the Institute offer a sport or hobby for everyone? Affirmative again is the answer. Then where is the difficulty? The answer to this lies in several high places. It's not that the Institute doesn't encourage school spirit but it is rather the students who won't participate. What's the matter? An article which was printed in THE TECH.

Jack Pizika is one of the top scoreeers on the rugby team. He stands 6'1" and weighs 183 pounds. Before entering MIT he played Varsity football for Manasquan, N.J. Jack is one of the first members of the Rugby Club and in his three years of playing, he has alternated between half forward and post. Besides playing rugby, Jack manages to find time for studying his beloved subject, "Math," and for beer drinking and dancing at the Rugger parties. Jack graduates this June '52 with a degree in Math.

Women Eng's Soc. Presents First Award To Dr. Marie Telkes

Dr. Marie Telkes, a research associate in metallurgy at the Institute, who invented a device with which shipwrecked sailors can distill sea water for drinking purposes, recently received the first award for meritorious contributions to engineering given by the Society of Women Engineers.

Dr. Telkes was presented the award at the annual dinner of the society in New York. The award was established to honor Women in the field of engineering.

The distilling system designed by Dr. Telkes uses solar heat to make sea water potable. She also adapted this system to the production of small distilling units which can be carried on the life raft. While designing the apparatus she was serving as civilian advisor to the Office of Scientific Research and Development during World War II.

Dr. Telkes is now working on studies of the use of the sun's rays for solar research at the Institute, and is carrying out research during World War II.

Combined Planners To Confer At Tech

A conference for the students taking part in combined plan will be held at the Institute during the latter part of this week. The combined plan is a plan whereby a student goes to any one of fifteen cooperating colleges for three years and then comes to the Institute for the completion of his degree. The first general meeting will be held on Wednesday morning immediately following a tour of the Institute. Course lectures will start that afternoon. Thursday evening there will be a dinner to be held in the Campus Room. The dinner will be informal and many graduates of the colleges will be invited to talk informally among the students. The formal part of the conference will be held on Friday evening with the second general meeting. On Friday various professors will be available for conference.

Deferments

using full time research in a technical or scientific field will be delayed upon request. Decrees will be granted. Appendix 3 and 4 list nearly all the fields in engineering and medical professions. To apply for a delay in call, obtain form 23A from Mr. Lati, office 7-H, and a letter from the dean, and present these for application for a deferment.
