When the announcement was made last week by President Dwight D. Eisenhower that he would be inaugurated in January, the first question that came to the minds of many, outside of the president's own, was whether he would return to the Ritz Carlton. After all, the hotel had been a symbol of the president's official residence since the long ago days of his campaign. But this year, it seems, the president has decided to move to a new hotel, the Four Seasons.

The president's decision to move to the Four Seasons was not without controversy. Many felt that the Ritz Carlton, with its long history and traditional decor, was the perfect place for a president to stay. However, the president felt that the Four Seasons, with its modern amenities and up-to-date facilities, was the better choice.

The move to the Four Seasons has also been met with some resistance from the hotel staff. Many employees have worked at the Ritz Carlton for years and are not happy with the change. However, the president has assured them that they will be taken care of.

The president's decision to move to the Four Seasons has also been seen as a way to modernize the presidential residence. The Four Seasons is known for its luxurious accommodations and top-of-the-line amenities, and the president has been seen as a symbol of modernity and progress.

In addition to the new hotel, the president has also made some changes to the presidential suite. The suite has been renovated, with new furniture and updated decor. The president has also added some new features, such as a state-of-the-art security system and a high-end kitchen.

Overall, the president's decision to move to the Four Seasons has been met with mixed reactions. While some feel that the move is a positive step, others are not so sure. Only time will tell if the president's new hotel will become as iconic as the Ritz Carlton.

It might be said that the riot which broke out in the Engineers vs. Brandies soccer game on October 24, 1952, is the latest in a series of incidents that have marred the sports spirit of the Harvard community. The game was played in front of a large and enthusiastic crowd, but the excitement on the field was only temporary, and the teams returned to the sidelines in a spirit of mutual respect and sportsmanship.

The game was played on a beautiful fall day, with the sun shining brightly and the leaves changing colors. The crowd was cheering wildly, and the atmosphere was electric. However, as the game progressed, tensions rose, and the fans began to argue and shout at each other. The players, too, were feeling the pressure, and some of them started to lose their cool.

The game ended in a 2-2 tie, but the atmosphere was far from calm. Both teams were angry and felt that they had been wronged. As they walked off the field, they turned to the crowd and started to argue, shouting and pushing each other. The situation quickly spiraled out of control, and a riot ensued.

Soph Tear Gas Stops Small Freshman Rally

That infernal machine, a Sophomore-made and thorny tear-gas gun, provided the high point of a sparsely attended Freshman Rally held in Room 3-190 last Tuesday evening.

Earlier in the proceedings, several Junior and Senior athletes along with Captain Zear Hollard had tried to instill some "Fire" and "Get-Up-And-Go" in the weary and side-ruled embattled freshmen, without notable success.

The tear gas bomb, fired by a lively group through the basement along with the purging effect of a good rain, proved to invigorate the small group.

Their vitreous noses were held high, their tear-dogged shins blinking with pride, as their lines-mates (along with their spectra) bost but not broken, the tears of Modern Art representing some of the best American-cinema art. These tears were fired not by the dominant tear-gas gun, but by the dominant Freshman Rally Committee.

The series, if presented, will be free to the public, in an effort to save the loss of student rent-money.

of the Margaret Marned Fund at the request of the Association of Women Students. Profits from the past freshman week-end shall be given to the Class of '56 for them to spend however they please with the approval of the Finance Board. The Finance Moderator Committee must submit a budget during the spring term.

"Election of class officers on the fourth Tuesday of April," was even official following the Student Government Investigating Committee report.

This was done to make class officers elections competitive with most elections of officers of other student activities. However, certain organizations, such as the debate, music, and drama clubs will be unaffiliated. The whole operation is sponsored by the Student Government Investigating Committee and will get underway at 7 p.m. If you have nothing better to do, we recommend you drop over — bring your own nose; any kind will do.

Flavor that chill can't kill

Here's beer that holds its fine flavor even when served ice-cold.

Ballantine Beer is deep-brewed for flavor

Winter or summer, what's as refreshing as the quenching flavor of cold beer?

Ballantine Beer is deep-brewed for flavor. For lightness, yes! For dryness, of course!

But best, last, and always, Ballantine brews for flavor... the fine, full flavor that chill can't kill.

Serve Ballantine Beer right off the ice. Every well-chilled glass just brims with flavor!
