Newspaper Delivery System Goes Into Effect

Beginning with Tuesday's issue, the delivery system of the paper will be changed. This change involves the re-definition of the delivery system from a local to a regional basis. The entire campus will be divided into five sections, each of which will have a delivery center. The new system will be in effect on September 15th.

On Sunday, August 16th, the new system will be introduced to the campus. All students and faculty members will be notified about the change in advance. The new system will provide a more efficient and timely delivery of the newspaper to all members of the community.

A JUDICIAL SYSTEM UNDER FIRE

Institute Committee's Judicial Sub-Committee met Wednesday, and for the second time in as many weeks "arbitrarily" chose to keep its meeting closed. The case under discussion was still the one concerning implied intimidation of student government members. When questioned about his reasons for closing Wednesday's meeting, the chairman of Judicial Committee replied, "no comment." He said that his reasons were still the same as those given last week. At that time The Tech felt that the decision to hold a secret meeting was an arbitrary one. We can do no more than to consider it just as arbitrary a decision in this instance. It is, in fact, more so a case of discretionary action inasmuch as this, their second meeting, could not be excused as one of an investigatory nature. A decision was to be reached, and in the best interests of all those involved should have certainly been kept open so that all students could judge for themselves the merits of the case in question. We feel very strongly that this is the only way the student body can understand the workings of its judicial system and evaluate in their own minds, the validity of any Judicial Committee decision. This is the only workable system of "checks and balances" the students can maintain over any further arbitrary action.

Once again the witness specifically requested an open session but when informed that members of The Tech had requested attendance to the meeting the chairman of Judicial Committee said that such an entrance would not be granted to them. Further evidence of the unfortunate results which can only come from such a veil of secrecy is the questionable position of the Faculty Committee on Discipline pertaining to this case. It is a well known fact that members of the faculty "viewed with alarm" the question of possible intimidation of student government in which this case has been closed since its beginnings. One of JuDiComm's members quoted an administration member as saying, "if you don't do something about this case, we will." It has even been reported that the faculty considered handling this case from the very start. Now that JuDiComm's disinterestedness in Discipline did not meet beforehand with JuDiComm to discuss this case. And although we question the wisdom of its members to express their too-quickly-reached individual opinions based on hasty and inconclusive implications (which might very well sway Judicial Committee's decisional), their apprehensions might have been avoided had JuDiComm considered this case just as any other until its severity could be determined, and had they refrained from keeping the students completely in the dark with its secrecy.

A change in policy is no longer in the suspension stage. It is an outright necessity.

SUCH A LITTLE, UNFORTUNATE WORD

It has been the habit of most college newspapers to attack controversial topics as the levying of a student tax to pay for last year's pre-Field Day activities, the insomnium motion to ban off-campus housing, and the question of announcing Judicial Committee's decisions have undoubtedly elicited some individual comments. What bothers us, however, is that this "public opinion" is only expressed in private.

It is little that the side of the argument is taken but rather the very fact that opinion be aroused is of utmost importance to the proper operation of government. The Tech has made, and will continue to make available its "Through the Mail" column to all those who feel they have an opinion to convey. The referendum to be held Tuesday is an even more direct outlet for student expression. It is sincerely hoped that both these methods will be utilized.

Apathy is such a little word. It takes only a little awakening to remove it completely from our vocabulary.
