NO ANIMALS ALLOWED!

There comes to every editor a time when someone expects the impossible of him. We were quietly lounging around the office, some few hours before the issue went to press, when we were informed by a freshman who delights in spoiling other people’s fun that there was a large blank space on page two. So we poured ourselves another round of cognac and started to think.

At that some screwball, ill-fated feline wandered into the inner sanctum from somewhere up among the rafters of Walker Memorial. Never has there been a more deplorable manifestation of the feline spirit. With a word he went to our liquor cabinet and helped himself to a glass of our finest brandy. Only then did this animal even look at us, and then only to say, “Thanks, lads; I needed a breather, after all with those drunks upstairs.”

We threw a typewriter at him.
The cat departed, but not for long. Scant minutes later, just a matter of time, he slid into view again. With a low growl, he snarled, “I’m going to get to the bottom of this!”

The animal left, looking as wretched as ever, with the warning, “Nice place you’ve got here, I’ll be back.”

Synopsis of Act I: A middle-aged English Professor named Phipps has fallen desperately in love with a rosy-kneed coed named McFetridge, for, after all, he is a professor in the autumn of his years. He sees McFetridge with a beauty of French flavor, for instance, and, well, you know what happens. After he has done his bidding to satisfy the protection was to discard rather than discard, eventually collected two pairs, the final contract was reached by most.

The opening club lead was taken by McFetridge, for, after all, he is a professor in the autumn of his years. The bidding is typical of duplicate games, there’s a new Tony Curtis picture downtown-a real gut-buster.

AIEE-IRE Shows New Energy Labs At Recent Meeting

Last week’s meeting of the AIEE-IRE was highlighted by the exposition of the new and improved facilities of the Energy Conversion Laboratory in the basement of Building 11.

Professor Gordon S. Brown, head of Course VI, was the first speaker. Among the topics he touched upon was the increasing importance of the Electrical Engineer in controlling the processes of the other technical areas through his superior understanding and adaptation of instrumentation.

Professor David C. White, in charge of the Energy Conversion Lab, then discussed the new facilities and alterations this summer have provided. He was followed by Professors G. G. Trump who spoke about Thesis Outlines. Prof. Trump is in charge of the Thesis Proposals Committee for Course VI.

About 300 students attended the meeting, which was arranged by the student branch of the AIEE-IRE in conjunction with the Course VI Student Faculty committee. Refreshments were served.

During the meeting Paul Luckett, '55 of the Technology Christian Association, will probably be present.
