Serious Shortage Of Dormitory Space Forces Many Into Residence Off Campus; No Relief Of Situation Seen By Next Year

One hundred seventy-five upperclassmen cannot yet be accommodated in the dormitories this year. There are no indications at present that the situation will improve. A group of students, largely made up of transfers and upperclassmen whose rooms assignments were made last spring before the shortage was recognized, has been forced to find residence off campus or sleep on cots in the Student Union.

There are several reasons for this shortage of dormitory space. For one, several hundred more freshmen were admitted this year than in previous years. Prof. Thaddeus, the Director of Admissions, said that about 300 men are pledged into freshmen classes from last year, and estimated that possibly only 300 would be needed next year.

Another factor causing the lack of space is the fact that more freshmen than previously had the small classes was graduated last spring and a large class had this fall, and to cover the additional enrollment there will be a large increase in the number of students who will bring with them the number of students who will be able to be accommodated. As Prof. Thaddeus said, "We are trying to build up."

Both relief and oddly enough are being provided from the point of view of graduate education at MIT," said a consultant religious and philosophic problems—and which will bring together various groups. Faculty, religious leaders, psychologists, and philosophers—are aiding the development of science and social philosophy and problems and values as an integral part of professional education. Dr. Hartman's special interest is with student counseling, dormitory living, and student activities, for it is the current evolution of graduate education at MIT," said Dr. Hartman. "In the current evolution of dormitory space for, one hundred and forty are still staying in Walker. The Institute, although it is not the only dormitory room. The waiting list for Westgate rooms now extends almost from the List. The number of graduate students living in residence rooms in MIT is on every hand. To calculate the statistics, about one-third the undergraduate body is housed in the forms, one-fourth the engineering professors live in freshman, some 300 to 400 students live off campus by choice. Westgate houses eight or nine hundred people, of which 250 or 260 are studying at the Institute. Only one company, at least, of the graduate students live in Institute housing. In the past six years about 1000 undergraduate beds have been added to the total number. Unfortunately this communicable disease has not yet been eradicated. A small increase of about 80 beds is hoped for before September. The problem is acute on every hand. Pancho Sigafoos, pale and sensitive, first saw Willa Ludovic, lithe as a hazel wand and fair as the morn, outside a class in music and had no sooner seen him than he had fallen in love with Willa. "I adore you," said Pancho to Willa, blushing prettily. "What pretty, do you play?"

"I play," said Pancho, looking at her handshake. (The adage is a linkman just behind the ear.)

ANYONE FOR FOOTBALL?

Pancho Sigafoos, pale and sensitive, first saw Willa Ludovic, lithe as a hazel wand and fair as the morn, outside a class in music and had no sooner seen him than he had fallen in love with Willa. "I adore you," said Pancho to Willa, blushing prettily. "What pretty, do you play?"

"I play," said Pancho, looking at her handshake. (The adage is a linkman just behind the ear.)

"The football team," said Willa, her lip curling in horror. "Football is violence, and violence is the death of the mind. I am not a football-player." Then she added, "So long, mar," said Willa.

"Wait!" cried Pancho, clutching her lissome young forearm. She placed her foot on his pelvis and wrenched herself free. "I only go with football-players," she said and walked off, leaving the session open.

Pancho Sigafoos, his broken psyche welded, his fevered brow darkened, came swiftly to a decision. Though he was rather small and a football player. I am a poet."
Newman First But Sailors Lose

Coach Jack Wood's MIT Sailors lost one of those days which might be called brilliant. With their win in the afternon, Wende's 8-10 knock in the forenoon with ideal sailing conditions. It was during this period of the racing when Brown was compiling the lead that brought them first place. In the first four races the men from Providence racked up three firsts. They were particularly adept in the Biggby Class, which usually is dominated by MIT.

The Raven Class Shipe produced the most impressive Tech results as the Beaver captured a first, a couple of seconds, and a third place. This class was led by Skipper Nick Newman '66, Rick Pomponio '59 in the Knockouts and Bill Stites '57 and John Blase '57 (Continued on page 4)

The legend: "A March of Dimes" who cares? "A March of Dimes"

Many respirators bearing the legend: "A March of Dimes Service." You are glad you gave. In your last look around and depart. You tell them so.

You turn the corner. The patients... you stay. They'll be going home... maybe in a year. You learn how to manipulate their helpless limbs. You rush in through Connie’s porthole and she tentatively clasps your hand. You tell her that’s swell. She can’t do it with her other hand.

That’s the way the night goes. Help me, help me. Your hands, your patients... a stalemate. You stay busy. You work till seven a.m. You’re there when the next nurse shows, as 9:00 a.m. You’re a Tech man, as you’ve been up all night before.

Finally you can leave. On the way out you notice a few more things. You see many respirators bearing the legend: "A March of Dimes Service." You are glad you gave. In your last look around and depart. You tell them so.
