Mermel, Ladd win IFC auto rally

Scott Mermel '68, and Gerry Ladd '68, drove their cars to victories in the "Best of the Pants" and the "Choozapped" divisions, respectively, of the IFC sports car rally, held Sunday, from the Sloan parking lot. The Rally was planned for Spring Weekend, although not a part of the weekend's events.

The Rally, a greater than fifty mile time-speed-distance event began at 11:00 a.m. Two divisions raced, the "Best of the Pants," which carried no calculating equipment, and the "Choozapped," which was allowed to carry stop watches and slide rules. A prize followed the racing events.

Fassett Fund nears goal; Memorial site not yet named

The recently initiated Julie Fassett Memorial Fund drive is making rapid progress toward its goal of a campus garden retreat memorializing the late wife of MIT's former Dean of Student Affairs. According to Phil Weller, chairman of the student committee, alumni response has been good. He also says: "Student donations are very encouraging, but I am afraid some students do not realize this is the only chance they will have to donate to the fund." The Committee hopes for about $30,000 from undergraduates and $50,000 overall.

Two sites are being discussed: The first is the area between the Hayden Library and the main building and the alternate location is in the west campus area along Amherst Alley near Boston House. The Student Committee realizes Thursday night is a key Seminar's conception of the project, to attempt to set the final location, and to discuss action before the end of the term.

Leary, Lettvin to speak on LSD perils, prospects this Wednesday in Kresge

By Jack Katz

Tomorrow night Timothy Leary and Professor Jerome Lettvin of the MIT biology department will speak on LSD before a capacity crowd in Kresge auditorium.

Strong attraction

The forthcoming discussion has proven to be a strong attraction to the MIT community. The Lecture Series Committee sold out the 1236 tickets to Kresge in five and three quarter hours. Those who wish to attend the discussion who did not obtain tickets may hear it piped into the lobby of Kresge. Tickets were sold exclusively to the MIT community and it is estimated that 95% of the audience will be students.

Presentation

The evening will begin with half-hour talks by each of the speakers. Following will be a question and answer period which is supposed to be the most interesting part of the evening. The evening may prove a little bizarre as Leary has requested to give his talk from a mattress.

Speakers

Professor Lettvin is an appropriate speaker to accompany Leary due to his special interest in LSD and the scientific perspective that he can offer.

Leary upon being asked for his personal history presented a Playboy interview.

SDS supporters to condemn draft

The MIT chapter of the Students for a Democratic Society will sponsor a meeting on the topic "The Draft: Cautiousness and Selection Objective." Thursday night in the Student Center. At the meeting, signatures will be solicited for a petition condemning the draft.

Speakers

The meeting will feature two speakers: Steve Hudigen, Draft Chairman of the American Friends Service Committee, and Paul Schaefer '70 of the MIT-SOS.

The petition, similar to one signed recently at Harvard by 86 undergraduates, including four MIT students, states: "We, the undersigned American men of draft age, having noted the Nuremberg decision which stated that the objections of one's conscience transcended the obligations to one's country, and having studied carefully the background and nature of the Vietnamese war, find that we have no alternative morally consistent with our moral beliefs but to refuse to serve in the armed forces while the United States is fighting in Vietnam."

For further information on the meeting, contact Steve Shalom '69 (451-4621).

Entertainment highlights SW

Nearly 2,000 MIT students and their dates flocked to the many events of Spring Weekend at and W. This year's SW was set apart from those of previous years by the unprecedented number of enter- tainers who performed.

Most couples divided Friday night between the five "area attractions" rooms in the Student Center and one of the two concerts of the Brothers Four in Kresge. The Brothers Four's well-received concerts ran somewhat later than expected, but no one seemed to mind as everyone returned to the Student Center to witness the crowning of the SW Queen.

Rides, music fill Saturday's slate

The vigorous efforts of Junior Walker and his All Stars brought a large cluster of students and their dates up to the stage at Rocky Point and provided impetus for the large number who chose to dance.

MIT counterguerrilla forces attack Buzzards Bay in training exercise

By Tom Dooley

At 8:30 Sunday morning Cadet Captain Ray Boxman '68 led the MIT counterguerrilla platoon in the final assault on the Buzzard's Bay water pumping station. One squad rushed through and planted the explosives. Resisting a heavy attack on the left flank, Boxman pulled back after suffering moderate casualties.

Buzzard's Bay attack

This attack culminated a 24-hour assault by counterguerrilla units from WPI and MIT on the vital facilities of Buzzard's Bay and the Cape Cod canal. By morning the assaulting forces had destroyed the railroad bridge, one auto bridge, and half of another despite the efforts of counterguerrilla units from Northeastern University with the aid of civil authorities.

Demolition was accomplished by planting wooden stakes which represented charges in strategic locations.

The MIT unit with reinforcements from City College of New York began its assault Saturday morning, arriving from eight kilometers north of the canal at 10 am. The unit moved through the dense underbrush to arrive at a mission support site at 6:30 in the evening. After receiving information from a friendly partisan and obtaining new supplies, the unit divided into four squads led by Steve Bridges '69, Roger Chang '69, Chris Haaland '69, and Boxman.

Process of attack

These squads began three hours of harassing operations at 10 pm. At 1:30 Sunday two units rallied with each other at the Bourne and Sagamore Bridge rotaries. By creating a roadblock and destroying the overpass approaches to the bridge the units allowed units from WPI to complete demolitions of the bridges.

The administrators, who were regular Army officers and who traveled with each unit to act as personnel and to decide who was captured, called an administrative break from 4 to 7 Sunday morning. Following this, the troops were resupplied to begin the final attack on the pumping station.

Spring Weekend commentary

The Spring Weekend Committee did an admirable job in planning the overall weekend, but an unfortunate neglect of important details put the damper on a number of the parts of the weekend.

We point out these faults not to be against the dispensing area bent on gaining a favor which was their due. The mugs were distributed by an inefficient system which required a half hour of jorting and fighting to secure one. Many of the more aggressive members of the community were able to plunge through to grab two or more mugs, while others received no momento at all. A little foresight could have made the entire scene unnecessary.

After the first concert, the people in charge at the Student Center found all the entertainment on a break, so that many roamed about for twenty minutes aimlessly; the second and third floors seemed like a bee hive without a queen.

Speaking of queens, the queen judging fell through as most of the Spring Weekend Committee were at the second concert and there was no one around to do the judging. The poor finalists were called together and wound up waiting for the judges for a good part of the evening. When time had been reached, everyone had left.

Saturday was considerably better, but still suffered from some poor planning. There were some confusion at boarding the buses while a number of personal articles on buses. There was some confusion at boarding the buses which left at 8 p.m.

Investment Prospects for Summer
(Pros, Cons, and Attitudes)

Dear Mr. Galvin:

In opening this dialogue, you indicated that business is concerned because it is not attracting the best of college graduates. It is my feeling that in the complex competition for men's minds and ambitions, business has repeatedly fumbled the ball in its own end zone. On the whole, it has either misled or altogether neglected its most valuable recruitment asset—summer work experience as a pre-recruitment tool.

Unfortunately, the few business opportunities which are available to students during the summer are usually scaled-down versions of existing management training programs; they are designed for the college graduate who has already committed himself to a business career and now seeks specialized training. To the uncommitted student who is merely looking for a general exposure to business, this specialized and frequently menial training can be extremely frustrating. Deprived of the general introduction and orientation which he desires, the student gradually translates his boredom and dissatisfaction into alienation toward the entire business community.

What is needed are orientation programs which impart professional perspective and a general acquaintance with the field. Toward this end, the Harvard Business School will initiate a program this summer for highly qualified college juniors which is designed to expose them to business as a challenging, rewarding profession rather than to train them for specific positions within the firms.

Unfortunately, the corporations participating in this internship program along with the few others which have imaginative and progressive summer orientation programs (e.g. First National City Bank, Mobil Oil, AT&T, and First National Bank of Chicago) represent an almost insignificant proportion of the total which could participate. They alone cannot be expected both to proselytize for the business community and to ameliorate the recruiting errors of their professional associates.

Clearly, more firms should look beyond selfish temporal considerations and view the hiring of students during summers as an investment in the future rather than an investment upon which immediate return is expected. Only when summer employment is recognized and utilized as an invaluable pre-recruitment tool can business expect to attract more and better qualified college graduates.

—Jim Hill
Harvard University

Dear Mr. Hill:

There is great validity in your statement that business has not often enough provided a meaningful internship experience for promising students. Business has too often succumbed to the temptation of "fumbling" in what could be its most meaningful recruitment tool.

I hope you also would agree with me that too many cases have occurred in which promising college students serving an internship in a company have not proved their worth in performing meaningful assignments for that particular business.

As a result of these two situations, I would say that all too many summer jobs have proved neither challenging to students nor rewarding to the company.

This, certainly, is an area in which business, working with educators, has to come up with better answers.

I can assure you that we are going through this process in our own company and many other businessmen are doing likewise. Hopefully, we will recover the fumble in time to make internships rewarding experiences to many capable college students.

I view student employment as an investment—however, it must be two-way: an investment of serious effort on the part of the student to contribute beneficially to the company as well as an investment by the company in probing for fresh, young ideas which will prove helpful to its business.

The program at Harvard you mentioned in your letter is familiar to me. I think it is commendable. Hopefully, other business schools will initiate similar work-and-study programs. This type of experience may be just what many students are looking for and I would encourage them to participate in one of these internships. The more interest that is shown, the more likelihood there will be for other organizations and institutions to follow suit.

I am also aware of other companies who are making special effort to tailor summer programs to the drives and needs of talented college students. You have mentioned some yourself. The fact that corporations are looking into this and applying themselves to the task, augurs very well. With the interested participation of university faculty and administrators in this effort, I think we soon can show substantial progress in this matter, mutually agreeable to both student and business.

To those students who have fresh ideas and talents that will provide benefit to both themselves and the corporation, I recommend they let these ideas be known. The fresh idea in itself is the best recommendation for getting a meaningful summer job. For the student to say to business, "Show me, and I will perform," is ordinary; for him to say, "Let me show you my ideas," makes a splendid application.

You say business should look beyond "selfish temporal considerations" and view summer hiring as an investment in the future. I agree. I suggest that students view summer hiring beyond selfish personal considerations and look to those jobs as opportunities to be of value to the company, not only to gain exposure to business. An experiment in this could prove most valuable.

The MIT International Students' Council has recently embarked on an orientation program to benefit newly admitted foreign students while they are still in their native country. The program will rely almost entirely on the aid volunteered by U.S. and foreign students going abroad this summer. Each volunteer will be paired with the name of a newly admitted foreign student to contact in the city or area he plans to visit.

The ISC is presently seeking people to take part in the new program. Those interested should obtain information sheets at the dormitory desks or the Foreign Student Office this week.

The most important recent happenings in rock music in the national Jefferson Airplane and in a lesser extent The Grateful Dead. The following two-part report on the Bay area scene is based on a large extent on comments from Frisken Larry White, editor of fanzines and personal friend of several of the Airplanes.

Jefferson Airplane has had two albums and the singles on RCA. They have been big in SF for somewhat over a year but only their most recent single "Somebody to Love" and album "Surrealistic Pillow" have given them the national prominence they deserve. Both are 44 and rising rapidly on their respective Billboard charts, but this doesn't begin to measure their Boston popularity, with "Pillow" one of the Cog's best selling albums and their fabulous two-week Union sell-out.

Second album better "Surrealistic Pillow" has the same basic sound as their first album, "Jefferson Airplane Takes Off," a folk-based sound with a message of love and beautifully

Hot and cold are the words that best describe the MIT varsity lacrosse team Saturday as it improved its season's record to 6 wins and 4 losses by defeating Bowdoin, 36-0. The Techmen took three quarters before putting the game out of reach. In the final period they scored four times on their opponents 40 in 15 minutes.

Steve Schroeder '67 gained scoring honors for the afternoon making 4 goals and combining for 2 assists.

Bowdoin was first to rip the nets, scoring about two minutes into the game. Before the period's next goal came, however, the scoreboard had the total at 3-1. Greg Wheeler '67 accounted for the first Tech goal on the first man-up opportunity of the afternoon. A minute later, Ken Schwartz '69 made it 2-1 taking a save. Curt Van Zeeck '68 then put MIT two ahead with John Grant '66 getting the assist.

Tech's defense held the Bears to one scoring opportunity in the second period. Mike Keating '67 turned cold. Before the period was over, Bowdoin was first to rip the nets, scoring about two minutes into the afternoon. A minute later, Ken Schwartz '69 made it 2-1 taking a save.
