TEN battles finance woes

Over the past few years Tech Engineering News (TEN) has suffered from poor management and has lost a great deal of its advertising revenue due to the economic downturn.

Financial problems

TEN has long been a successful, though troubled, publication. Beginning publication in 1919, it continued to grow in size and quality to reach its peak in the 1960s. At that time the magazine was nearly destroyed by mismanagement: there was extreme mismanagement. With funds and outright graft of some five hundred dollars of the budget.

Reportedly, the editors of TEN held meetings during dinner dates with their fiancées, charging the tab to the magazine. After all, the tenure archives there is mention of an incident in which, without the editor’s knowledge, the name of the general manager’s fiancée appeared on the masthead as co-editor.

TEN was put on probation after being suspended for a time. A board of faculty members was appointed to oversee the operations, and to prevent a repetition of the trouble. Fortunately, until the late 60s, the situation was exceptionally good and the magazine seemed certain to recover fully.

In the fall of high quality, TEN is generally less comprehensive than its editors would like it to be because of the continuing scarcity of ad revenue.

This is largely due to the cutting down of advertising by large companies such as Siroxyn, Westinghouse, PMC Corp., and Union Carbide, which used to regularly recruit on campus. With the present job situation, such procedures have naturally come to a roaring halt, and TEN’s main source of funds has been reduced.

Where is Mao Nixon?

Peter Feckehuti

It seems obvious to me in current crisis within the People's Republic of China. Everything else is murky. Exactly what has gone wrong politically, how the regime may be systematically destroyed, and how the populace is reacting, are all points that have not yet happened, to a moment, a mystery

However, the following statements, listed in decreasing order of certainty, appear to be the fact:

1) The traditional October 1st celebration of the Chinese Communist Party and society's victory has been cancelled. Ordinarily, Commu-

2) The literary and artistic societies, and the Cambodian Ministry of Information, have not been seen in public since approxi-

3) Mao has not been married along the Amur River which forms part of the border between the Soviet Union and China.

4) Chinese Premier Chou En-lai re-appears on the scene, his recent visit to the Central Committee had been cancelled, reporting to the Central Committee on Wednesday, September 13 for about 15 minutes. Both moves are highly unusual indications of Mao's health the last meeting of the Central Committee was on April 26.

5) A meeting of the Communist Party's Central Committee or Politburo was held this weekend, reporting to the Politburo delegation reported seeing 50 to 60 cars outside of the building. Chairman Mao was not reported to have appeared on the evening broadcast on Friday, September 27 in Room 3-446.

The question remains as to what type of portrait is to be created with these eggs. Rigel speculation runs along three lines. The most probable explanation is that some type of power struggle is underway within the ruling clique. Next in line is the possibility that Mao has died again (rumors about Mao's death usually circulate two or three years a year). The third possibility is that he is in his room, under guard, and covered, themselves against a recent visit from American gaffe when Dr. Kissinger's visit to Peking went undis-

President will have consulted before he sets foot in China. Hence the facts admit of a number of plausible explanations. Admitted all of these in that obvious that something's going on. No immediate implications to the Chinese. Are these domestic implications to the Chinese? The story is too tragic to be true, but it is true. Mao's health is the South's problem of succession would arise. There is a probability of power struggle is underway within the ruling clique. The Chinese, on their side, will be interested in the possibilities of power struggle. The companies, on their side, will be interested in the possibilities of power struggle. The companies, on their side, will be interested in the possibilities of power struggle. The companies, on their side, will be interested in the possibilities of power struggle. The companies, on their side, will be interested in the possibilities of power struggle.
Legal technicalities stall student vote campaign

By Robert Fournier

A legal technicality has apparently delayed hopes that a large number of Cambridge students might register and vote in the upcoming city elections.

In a decision released Monday, Federal District Judge William D. Young declined to force the city's election board to accept a technicality of a standard in line with Attorney General Edward F. Warren's legal rule, announced and pronounced by Warren's opinion, which has been upheld by several lower courts.

The technicality, located in the city's election code, states that any married student must register to vote. Not only was last Wednesday night's registration meeting not well attended, but the city was the only legal test of the code. Its interpretation was followed by many other locations.

The format is similar to that of the Massachusetts Department of Public Safety, which has tested the code in several instances.

TEN publishes topical issues concentrating on college and city in-the-kitchen subjects, while its editors are students. In a recent issue edited by Apollo Lucas, has obtained comments from professionals and students (including former MIT grad Rudy Schweikert), who have also obtained its own copy of the Soviet Sukhov paper and published its own translation, which it distributed free.

Unfortunately, the quality of printing was poor, but copies were refused by several noted groups including the Russians.

In the case of one student who had asked the court to disallow registration before the November election, not only was the registration meeting not well attended, but the city was the only legal test of the code. Its interpretation was followed by many other locations.
