The architects are bracing, as Thanksgiving is upon them. No lectures heard from yet, though the heating and ventilation are promised for next term.

Mr. De Coster has finished his house. It is as good a piece of rendering as almost any which has been done in the department.

Sunny days are not at a premium in our department; we want some artificial clouds in the shape of window shades.

A novel has appeared at Vassar, written by one of the students, and entitled "A Foolish Virgin," which, if we may judge from the criticism in the "Miscellany," has not proved a decided success.
