practicing for the India-rubber freak profession, but simply endeavoring to follow the directions of his instructor, Mr. Smith, and utilize his natural gifts. Instruction as to this improved and inexpensive hair shoe brush will be furnished by him on application.

He was a Freshman, and you didn't have to look but once to see it, and his manner was quite gracious as he stood one morning early in the term at the door of the cage. "Will you please tell me where the Arch is?" he inquired. "The Arch?" responded Miss Bassett, in surprise; "I don't know what you refer to. There is the Archway book store down town, if that is what you mean." "O no," answered Freshy, confidently; "it is right around here somewhere; see, here it is in my tabular view,—'Math., Sect. 17, to Arch.'"

The Executive Committee of the Tech. Republican Club held a meeting in Room 20, Rogers, on Wednesday, October 19th. Mr. Pollock reported that the firm of Myers & Andrews had offered to furnish mortar-boards and gowns at $1.30 a suit. It was decided to secure competitive bids from several firms before ordering. Transparencies, torches, and calcium lights were discussed at some length. The chair stated that the parade would in all probability occur on the evening of Saturday, November 5th. The committee arranged to have a man stationed in the rear of Rogers corridor each day from one till two o'clock, to take the names and fees of all those who wish to join the club.

The Freshmen held a meeting in Room 11, Rogers, on October 18th, to take action on a class constitution. In the absence of both president and vice president, the meeting was called to order by the secretary, Mr. Franklin. It was moved and carried that '96 adopt '92's class colors. At this point Acting President Howe entered and took the chair. Mr. Ames then made a motion that a class assessment of twenty-five cents be levied. This was carried. It was further decided that the Executive Committee be empowered to purchase a class blackboard. Mr. Crosby suggested the necessity of having a permanent class football captain, and it was voted to allow the team to select its own captain. The chairman of the Constitution Committee read the proposed constitution, which was adopted without discussion. It provides for a formal election of class officers by a prescribed form of ballot. Temporary Football Manager Crosby was then unanimously elected permanent manager. After a short discussion of class yells the meeting adjourned.

Ninety-four continued its first Junior Class meeting on Saturday, October 15th. During the election of officers, which was the prime object of the meeting, the class was notified that the photograph to be reproduced in "Technique" would be taken on Tuesday, October 25th, time and place to be announced later. It was voted that the expenses incurred for printing at the time of electing the "Technique" Board should be borne half by the class and half by the Board. The balloting for officers resulted as follows: Mr. C. A. Meade was re-elected President by a large majority, no strong candidate appearing against him. After several very close ballots Mr. R. K. Sheppard was elected Vice President, and Mr. R. B. Price was then made Treasurer. Mr. C. W. Dickey was almost unanimously re-elected Secretary. The attendance at this meeting was fifty-seven, barely a quorum,—and this for the choice of Junior Class officers! Undoubtedly the quarter of the class present represented very well the opinions of the whole body; but if the class as a whole is to be officered at all, those officers should be chosen by the class, not by a section of it. It is disgraceful if the Junior Class of Technology, at one of its most important meetings, can show but one fourth of its members. As Sophomores, '94 had double that number at its first meeting; what, then, are we to expect when another year has elapsed? Ninety-four, wake up!
