REAT dissatisfaction arose last year and is again manifested, at the tardy manner in which the Architects' designs are judged. A few years ago the problems were prepared by the Professor of Design, and the students' work was criticised by him daily. The problems were judged by a jury of Boston Architects, and a criticism of the drawings ensemble was made by either the Professor or the Instructor in History of Ornament. A gradual change took place, and now the criticism, awarding of mentions and final criticism is performed by the Professor of Design; the tendency of which is to cause the design of every student to assume the characteristics favored by the Professor, since every man wishes his design to obtain as high a mention as is possible. Granting that this is the best method, it seems strange that designs should remain in the office so long that other drawings are well on their way, and the criticism becomes practically useless.

AS if in direct response to the editorials of The Tech in its last two issues, the beneficial results of the training table are to be supplemented by the work of an efficient coach. Mr. Wilson, '94, of Harvard, has been engaged to train the eleven until Thanksgiving Day and the Brown game. Since the Technology-Brown game at the South End Grounds, October 24, Brown has been making rapid progress in style of play, interference and snap, while Technology has advanced in these respects very much, though more slowly. In view of the desirability of making a good showing at Providence on the twenty-ninth, it is hoped that the establishment of the coach will be an important factor toward gaining strong team work, and so become the precursor of a second victory.

WE take pleasure in calling attention to the fact that Mr. Charles R. Boss, a graduate of Course IX., and formerly of The Tech Board, has been elected a member of the Connecticut State Legislature from New London. The honor is all the more marked because New London, though a city of about 15,000 inhabitants, is, according to the peculiar provisions of the Connecticut Constitution, allowed only two representatives, and also because Mr. Boss received the largest number of votes cast for any of the candidates, in spite of the fact, as was generally understood, that he was opposed by the "machine" of both parties. He was twenty-three years of age the first of November, and will be the youngest member of the incoming legislature.
