Twas the maid who to bloomers aspired
Whose riding was greatly admired,
Till a cabby one day
Knocked her into the clay—
Then the bloomers and bike were re-tired.

APPLIED MATHEMATICS.

"My daughter," and his voice was stern,
"You must set this matter right;
What time did the Sophomore leave,
Who sent his card last night?"

"His work was pressing, father dear,
And his love for it was great;
He took his leave and went away
Before a quarter of eight."

Then a twinkle came to her bright blue eye,
And her dimples deeper grew,
"'Tis surely no sin to tell him that,
For a quarter of eight is two."

—Lehigh Burr.

The earth is kissed with brown,
When the amber leaves come down.

From the forehead of the Greenwood
They are gone,
And they shine no longer emerald
In the sun;
And the winds that once did blow
Very soft and very low
On the Greenwood's head,
 Tear her brow-set wreath away,
And in wanton mood they say
"Buds are gone,
Well-a-day,
Bloom is dead."

Till the mountains crumble down,
This shall be,
Till the rocks and sands dissolve
In the sea;
So when leaves are dead and dry,
And must thinly buried lie
Through the frosty blast,
To our hearts we let them cling,
Where their old-time whispers bring
Memories
Of the spring
In the past.
