Week beginning March 29, 1897.

Park Theatre. — "A Stranger in New York" gives promise of being the most successful engagement during the season at the Park Theatre. Harry Connor and Marie Jansen in the title roles are proving themselves great favorites.

Boston Museum. — Exciting scenes are being enacted at the Museum, both on the stage and in the audience, where the crowds are held spellbound by the thrilling performances of Gillette's masterpiece, "Secret Service," which promises to have a long and prosperous season.

Hollis Street Theatre. — Mr. Nat Goodwin is attracting the usual crowded houses at the Hollis Theatre. His new comedy, "An American Citizen," gives him great opportunities, which he has utilized to the best possible advantage. Mr. Goodwin's admirable company is headed by the talented Maxine Elliot.

Tremont Theatre. — "The Two Little Vagrants" is scoring another success in Boston at the Tremont Theatre. It is a play which appeals to all classes by its pathos and tender humanity, and crowded houses are a nightly evidence of great popularity of this charming melodrama.

Castle Square Theatre. — The production of Balfe's "Satanella" will be a novelty to the present generation. The characteristics of Balfe's music in "Satanella" are similar to those in the "Bohemian Girl." The music is calculated to please the general public, and will be a notable event in the current season at Castle Square.

Boston Theatre. — Jacob Litts' perpetual success, "In Old Kentucky," opens at the Boston Theatre March 29.

The Zoo. — The ever popular "Zoo" is adding new attractions each week. "Joe" and Chiquita, the fascinating little midget, hold hourly receptions, and in addition are the promenade concerts.

Scribner's beautiful edition of Kipling; their celebrated Thistle edition of Stevenson. Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s superb edition of Hawthorne, Lowell, Emerson, Holmes, Whittier and Longfellow; (350 choice engravings; the only illustrated edition published).
