Week beginning March 21, 1898.

Hollis Street Theatre.—Mr. Charles Coghlan in his new play, "The Royal Box," will be the next attraction at the Hollis. The play has been very successful everywhere, and can only be given in Boston for one week. The scenery and stage settings are particularly fine, some of them being copies from old prints.

Boston Museum.—"Jack and the Beanstalk" still continues its phenomenal and deserved success. Miss Lessing and Miss Hollins are, if possible, more fascinating than ever before, and Ross Snow is capital as the "Dowager Queen of the Fairies."

Park Theatre.—This week, George Broadhurst's query in comedy form, "What Happened to Jones?" direct from its phenomenal run in New York, with a great company of comedians.

Boston Theatre.—Mr. Denman Thompson will return with his ever popular play, "The Old Homestead." Mr. Thompson will be supported by an excellent company.

Tremont Theatre.—The popularity of Mr. Sol Smith Russell's play, "A Bachelor's Romance," has been so great that he will present nothing else during his engagement here. Miss Nannette Comstock makes a most charming "Sylvia," and the rest of the parts are in the hands of excellent players.

Castle Square Theatre.—For this week the attraction will be a revival of the play of southern life, "Alabama," which will be recalled as one of the earliest successes of the stock company during the summer season.

Sportsman's Show (Mechanics' Hall).—All should go to this,—of interest to everyone, whether hunter or not.
