among themselves furnished $60 of the necessary expenses. Now this year's management is going to make an earnest effort to finish the year not only free of all debt, but with the New England championship flag. The men of the Institute will be given a chance to show their college spirit in a few weeks. A minstrel show will be held in order to raise the present debt. Let us at least make this a grand financial success.

In another column we reprint a clipping from the Army and Navy Journal, showing the part Capt. John Bigelow took in the desperate charge on San Juan Hill on July 1st. It shows what those of us who have listened to the lectures on Military Science during the past three years never doubted—that when the time for action came, Captain Bigelow would be found at the front. It is interesting to recall that less than a year ago we were told by Captain Bigelow that it was impossible to carry a fortified position without an attacking force outnumbering the defense three to one. That was theory. At San Juan these conditions were reversed, and no man realized what the attack might cost better than Captain Bigelow, yet no man acted more bravely.

The New Trophy Room.

The dream of The Tech and the Institute Committee is at last to be realized, and Technology is to have a trophy room. At the beginning of the term President Crafts invited members of a number of Technology societies to meet him in his office, and there unfolded to them a plan which embodied a joint trophy room and office for the various societies.

The room to be devoted to this purpose is number 34 Rogers, and will be available as soon as the new Mathematical Library is completed, and the books now in Room 34 removed. It is proposed to place a large cabinet outside the room in the hall, in which the banners and cups won by the Institute may be displayed, and at the same time be placed much more prominently before the students than would be possible if they were kept in the room. The walls of the room will display photographs of the Track teams, etc. Societies so desiring will have desk room, and bookcases will be provided in which records, papers, or books may be placed on file.

In furtherance of this plan, representatives of the Institute Committee, the Co-operative Society, the musical clubs, Y. M. C. A., Football Association, and Athletic Association held a meeting on October 12th to discuss the matter. It was voted that the Co-operative Society should purchase the desks, and rent them to the various societies. Messrs. G. C. Winslow, W. O. Adams, and J. L. Tufts were appointed a committee to take charge of the room. It will be necessary to make a schedule of meetings in order to avoid conflicts; therefore all societies desiring of availing themselves of office and committee room privileges will please communicate at once with the chairman of the committee in charge, G. C. Winslow.

The Story of an Army Hero.

Here is a great illustration of the stuff out of which the American soldier is made. On a cot in the army hospital at Fort McPherson reclines a captain with four Spanish bullet holes in his body and limbs. On July 1st that captain was in the advance as our men swept up the San Juan hill. A bullet struck his leg, but without stopping to stanch the flow of blood he pushed along, calling upon his men to follow. A private sprang forward to carry him from the field, but with a leap the captain was on his feet again, pointing his sword to the summit of the hill, calling out: “Steady there, on the right. Forward!”

With the blood dripping from one leg, and with his sword hand marked with the same
