THE recent handicap games were encouraging in some respects but in others much was to be desired. The weather was too severe for many spectators, and a large number of Tech. men preferred the Harvard football game. In the Track events, the records show that with the same amount of training Technology men can compete favorably with any college team. Considering the cold, wet weather, the soft track, and absence of any cheers from enthusiastic classmates, the records were exceptionally good. In fact, Technology has to-day probably the best class of sprinters and runners that it has ever had in its history. But in the weights the outlook is not so encouraging. We have good men, but they simply do not come out. If it were not for this our team would be a sure winner. In the high jump and the broad jump we are strong. Some of the men displayed a lamentable lack of training, but the nerve they showed was extremely gratifying. Summing up all these facts, the Meet was one of the most successful, from an athletic standpoint, that Technology has ever held.

At a meeting of the 'varsity Track team last Friday, Baxter, '91, was elected captain of the team in place of Burch, resigned. Baxter will be remembered by his steady and brilliant performances of last year. He won a large proportion of the points for his class in the class games, won first place in the high jump against Amherst, and second place at Worcester. The team has been very happy in its choice, and will win under Mr. Baxter if it is possible to win under any man.

ATURDAY'S game between Harvard and University of Pennsylvania, on Soldier's Field, was but another demonstration of a truth the general public has been so slow in recognizing; namely, that modern football is not accompanied by all the brutality that the enemies of the game would have us believe. However, in the past three or four years of its development the game has certainly undergone a marked improvement. Harvard won on her merits in
