ing a detailed report of this speech. To those who are not familiar with the name of Crispus Attucks and the circumstances leading up to the Boston Massacre, this important affair which played such a notable part in the chain of events immediately preceding the American Revolution, an hour spent in a visit to the Crispus Attucks Monument on Boston Common would not be time wasted.

E cannot allow the present occasion to pass without congratulating the Freshman Class upon the success, military, financial, and social, which attended the Exhibition and Competitive Drill held under the auspices of 1902 at the South Armory Friday night. Nothing could have been better planned, and the way in which all the details were carried out was such as to make adverse criticism impossible. Captain Bordman also deserves the thanks of every one for the interest he has shown in making the drill such a creditable Institute affair.

Again The Tech extends its heartiest congratulations to 1902.

In another column will be seen an account of the meeting held by the Advisory Council on Athletics. Managers of the different athletic teams should particularly take notice of what was passed, as it directly concerns them. By this it will be seen the proceeds of the class football games are to go to the benefit of the Football Association, and the proceeds of the class baseball games to the Athletic Association. Other games not included in this resolution are to be held subject to the Advisory Council, and the proceeds are to be placed in the hands of the Council to be disbursed for athletics as it seems best.

It will probably seem to many that the Advisory Council is exceeding its powers. But it must be remembered that the whole student body in forming this council gave it power over all athletics at the Institute. In this particular case, the Advisory Council learned that the proceeds of different games had been wrongly spent. In several cases the men on the team had a spree on the profits of the games. In another case the manager of the team had appropriated something like twenty dollars for his own benefit. It was to stop these abuses that the Council passed the resolutions.

The drill and competition were held under the direction of the 1902 Military Committee, in the South Armory. The attendance was large, and the financial success of the drill was insured. About one thousand spectators were present, and the enthusiasm of the constituencies of the different high schools ran high. The cheering for Technology was good and generous. The order of the features of the evening was as follows: 1. M. I. T. Battalion Formation; 2. Escort to the Color, by Company C; 3. Battalion Drill, under command of Acting Major Felix Mullaly; 4. Interscholastic Competition; 5. Battalion Review, under command of Acting Major E. H. Hervey; 6. Battalion Parade, under command of Acting Major W. H. Simpson. In the Interscholastic Competition the squads were commanded by Captains Mullaly, Briggs, and Hervey. The Battalion Formation commenced shortly after eight.

The most interesting, and perhaps the best executed, formation of the evening was the
