Week Commencing December 3, 1900.

NOTE. Thanksgiving matinees will be given at all the theatres on Thursday afternoon.

Hollis Street Theatre. — Mrs. Leslie Carter in David Belasco's famous play, "Zaza," is having a splendid success at this theatre. The engagement lasts through next week, and as this is the last appearance of "Zaza" in Boston nobody should miss seeing it.

Tremont Theatre. — Mr. E. S. Willard is playing daily to crowded houses and bids fair to make a record-breaking run. This week he will continue to play "The Middleman" on all evenings except Thursday, and on Thursday evening and Saturday afternoon he will give "The Professor's Love Story." Next week he will introduce a new play, "Punchiriello."

BACK BAY, BOSTON.

Boston Museum. — Next week is Mr. Hackett's last in his greatest success, "The Pride of Jennica." This play is well staged and the company is far above the average. Miss Galland does excellent justice to the part of the Princess.

Columbia Theatre. — Marie Dressler continues her tremendous success in "Miss Prinnt." One who has not seen Miss Dressler does not realize what a fun-maker she is. The rest of the company is good and the music is catchy. This week five new songs are introduced.

Castle Square Theatre. — "Nell Gwyn" one of the best plays the Castle Square Company has ever given, will continue for the rest of the week. Next week the original London Adelphi Theatre production of "The Great Ruby" will be given. The scenery is magnificent.

Boston Theatre. — "Quo Vadis" is continuing its success. The run is drawing to a close and people should not miss this excellent picture of early Roman life.

Park Theatre. — "The House that Jack Built" is making a name for itself already. This is not strange when one realizes it is one of the best of Broadhurst's comedies.
