tribute to the Institute such suggestions or appeals as that by Mr. R. H. Smith. The discussion of the Show advocates perhaps a doubtful policy in approving the general appeal to a wider outside public made by the later librettos, at the price of subordinating or even abandoning the old, purely local fun. Undoubtedly, as suggested, the music and dances of light opera, with few or no serious acting parts, are the most effective material; but these do not preclude an indefinite amount of local appropriateness in plot, character, dialogue and songs. Nothing can serve larger purposes effectively that does not first fulfill with corn-libraries containing works of great technical value.

We have just received notice of the death at College Station, Texas, on November 20, of William Chaille, '03, V.

Every effort is being made to produce cartoons superior to the best work of the best college comic papers, such as the Lampoon. The really charming little pictures on pages 114 and 117 make too noticeable the crudity of that on page 107.
