Colonial Theatre.

William H. Crane brings one of the most notable successes from the Comedie Francaise in “Business is Business,” which just closed a long engagement in New York. He shows his wonderful versatility as an actor in this drama, for he no longer appears as a comedian, but has one of the strongest, most effective and serious impersonations that has been seen on the American stage for years.

Hollis Street Theatre.

For the third week of the joint engagement of E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe at the Hollis Street Theatre, an especially noteworthy production of “Hamlet” will be given, with Mr. Sothern in the title role and Miss Marlowe as Ophelia, for the first time in Boston. This is unquestionably the most brilliant Shakespearean offering of the year, and the audience will be the most brilliant that these stars have ever known in this city.

Park Theatre.

Amelia Bingham makes the first change of play during her present engagement, and gives “The Frisky Mrs. Johnson,” which is one of Clyde Fitch’s most successful adaptations from the French. It made a great hit in New York, when Miss Bingham produced it there, and it will be given here by the players who have scored so great a success in “The Climbers,” during the last week.

Tremont Theatre.

The quaint character drawing and laughable episodes which are the salient features of George Ade’s “The County Chairman,” which delighted New York for a year, will no doubt prove just as attractive to the theatregoers here, during the run of this comedy which begins tonight.
