The Prom Committee of the Class of 1906 is now securing the names of those who desire to attend the Junior Prom, which will be held Thursday night, April 27. An attempt is being made to have the Prom particularly successful this year and the committee wish it to be understood that the attendance is by no means limited to the Junior Class. While the Juniors predominate, members of other classes are urged to attend, as a large and successful Prom cannot but reflect great credit upon Technology. The number of names already secured leads us to believe that the committee will be unusually successful this year, and everyone who can possibly attend should certainly make every effort to do so. Names may be left at the Cage for "Prom Committee, 1906."

The Overtime Bill would have strong advocates in the Political Economy sections.

The Weather Bureau prophesies (?) snow during June—in Engineering Alley.

TO THE EDITORS OF THE TECH:

Some men have come to me to ask me what was done last Friday toward organizing a club of play-goers, and to express interest in such a project. I should like again to meet any fellows interested, on Monday, at 4 o'clock, in Rogers 12. We can recount to new comers the proposals of the last meeting, and discuss further plans and suggestions. There will be a talk on The Problem Play and the Modern Drama, considering particularly Mr. Pinero's "Letty." Fellows who saw the play are especially invited to come and talk it over.

H. L. SEAVER.

Professor Despradelle, of the Architectural Department, has been giving a series of stereopticon lectures in Pierce 42, for Course IV students. Two of this course of lectures, which is on the theory of architecture, have been given, one on "Detail of Design," and one on "Columns." Dates of the remaining lectures will be announced in a short time.
