AT THE THEATRES.

Hollis Street Theatre.

One of the long awaited treats of the season will be at the Hollis Street Theatre this week, "The Duchess of Dantzic," a musical version of Madame Sans Gene." George Edwardes' company from London presented this play at Daly's Theatre, New York, all last season with such success that no other city had a chance to see it until this season. Among the London favorites who will appear in Boston for the first time are Eva Green, in the title role, and Holbrook Blinn, as Napoleon.

Colonial Theatre.

This is the last week of Fritzi Scheff and "Mlle. Modiste" in this city, and this comic opera success will not be seen here again. It has created little less than a furore and the fascinating prima donna has made the greatest hit of her artistic career. Her vivacity as an actress and her brilliancy as a soprano are employed to special advantage in this opera. She has a strong supporting company and the production is staged lavishly.

Park Theatre.

The long awaited, truly great American play has come at last in "The Lion and the Mouse" at the Park Theatre. Charles Klein has taken frenzied finance as his theme and the result is an especially vivid picture of American life of the present day. The cast is exceptionally strong. Edmund Breese and Grace Elliston are among the prime favorites with Boston audiences and show to the greatest of advantage at the head of the company.

Tremont Theatre.

Boston lovers of music will have an excellent opportunity to satisfy their taste during the next two weeks, while the Savage English Grand Opera Company is here. The advance sale of seats is the largest in the history of the Tremont Theatre. During the first week the following will be presented: Monday, "Aida"; Tuesday, "Lohengrin"; Wednesday matinee and night, "Aida" and "Rigoletto"; Thursday and Saturday matinee, "Tannhauser"; Friday, "La Boheme"; Saturday, "Faust."

Majestic Theatre.

Monday night will see the beginning of the fourth week of one of the most successful engagements ever known in Boston, of a rural drama, Dr. Snyder's "As Ye Sow," at the Majestic Theatre. The theatre going public of Boston, reinforced by the clergy and church-going class, which seldom attend the theatre, have crowded the magnificent theatre during the first three weeks of the engagement just ended.

LOST.

Drawing instruments, Heilman marked on inside of case. Were probably left in General Library on Friday. The finder will please leave the same at the Cage.
