A GREAT TRADE SCHOOL.

Perhaps the foremost trade school in the country, if not in the world, is the Lowell Textile School, at Lowell, Mass.

This school, located on a good factory site, combines in its large buildings complete cotton, wool and silk manufactories and sufficient museum and recitation rooms. During the three or four years' course, the students are put through a thorough training, both in the practical and theoretical sides of their trades. Night classes are held for working men.

The theoretical courses are patterned very closely after those given here at the Institute. The Principal and two of the instructors are graduates of Tech, and it is avowedly to Tech that the Lowell school looks for its ideals.

President Pritchett is a member of the board of directors.
