LOWELL INSTITUTE.

CROSS COUNTRY RACE.

Especially Interesting Lecture by Mr. Baddeley.

Interest in the Lowell Institute courses continues to be manifest, as was shown Monday evening, by the appreciative audience which listened to StClair Baddeley's fifth lecture, of a series on "Ancient Rome in the Light of Recent Discoveries" given in Huntington Hall.

Mr. Baddeley took as a subject for particular discussion, "The Rostra of Ancient Rome," its origin and their restoration. These rostra were the speaking platforms of the Roman public men and have existed since 338 B.C. After the battle of Actium in which the Romans so entirely annihilated the Volsian fleets, the senate caused the heaps of those captured galley's to be arranged upon the rostra. By his position as a member of the British Archæological Society, which has been interested in the restoration of old Roman buildings and landmarks, Mr. Baddeley is enabled to talk very interestingly on this subject of historical interest.

Through his own efforts in raising funds, Mr. Baddeley, on his recent trip to England, personally brought the restoration of many buildings in the district adjoining the old Roman Forum. These excavations are now going on through his efforts, the rostra in which Caesar was addressing the Roman Senate, when attacked by Mary Antony and slain, being among the most interesting of those recently restored.

A large number of stereopticon slides were used to supplement the hearer's interpretation of the talk. The next lecture of the series will be on Thursday, November 29.

Before adjournment it was decided to give every member of the class a bit of the Election Committee, and when the polls closed Monday afternoon at 4 p.m. a large vote had been cast. The results were as follows:
