Students of Technology: Some days ago the Board of Editors of Technique '07 sent a circular letter to every student in the Institute. The object of this letter was to secure the co-operation of the students.

Our annual is in no sense of the word a class affair. To make the book truly representative of the Institute as a whole, the Board must have the co-operation of every student. The number of men on the Board is so small compared to the total number of students that there must necessarily be many good things happening around the Institute which entirely escape the notice of the editors. This is true not only in the line of grinds, but in every other way. The Board needs new ideas. If any student has an idea which he thinks could be developed to advantage in Technique, let him see the Editor-in-Chief or any member of the Board, or leave a note at the Cage, and give the Board the benefit of his ideas.

One department of the book which especially needs the co-operation of the students is the Art Department. The architects who have contributed most of the drawings in past Techniques have done their best to make the students of the Institute to see the advantage which entirely escape the notice of the editors. This is true not only in the line of grinds, but in every other way. The Board needs new ideas. If any student has an idea which he thinks could be developed to advantage in Technique, let him see the Editor-in-Chief or any member of the Board, or leave a note at the Cage, and give the Board the benefit of his ideas.

We regret to announce the resignation of Mr. R. L. Lowe, 1897, from the Editorial Staff of Tech Toc.

We are glad to note that combed-beef hash is not on the menu of the new lunch room.

The announcement made by Prof. Swan of a series of readings, to which he invites the men of Courses I and XI, is Broadening received most cordially.

We understand that Prof. Swan has been under consideration for some time, and those men for whom the readings are especially intended are most sincerely to be congratulated. In the first place it is pleasant to be read to, and Prof. Swan certainly shows a great regard for the students in his department when he undertakes such a task. A course of this kind cannot fail to be interesting. But in addition to the pleasure assured his listeners, there is the opportunity to hear and to learn to appreciate the best efforts of some of the greatest writers. Those men who do not care for books or reading are the very ones who can profit most by attending these exercises; and those whose tastes already incline sufficiently to literature, at least enough so to enjoy a good book, should feel most delighted at the invitation which Prof. Swan gives them.
