NEW LECTURE COURSE IN NAVAL ARCHITECTURE

The Department of Naval Architecture has planned and started a long lecture course on subjects concerned with marine construction. In their particular lines of marine engineering the lecturers are all well grounded and the subjects are both interesting and varied. The fundamental principles of Naval Architecture will be talked upon and some of the lectures will deal with methods of ship designing, the construction of floating and graving docks, and the surveying of ships for repairs.

In general the lectures will occur in Engineering U, and several will be illustrated by lantern slides.

Two lectures, besides those in the following list, will be given. Arrangements for them have not been definitely made.

Feb. 28, "Surveying Ships for Repairs," Mr. Murphy, Lloyd Surveyor.

COLLEGE NOTES

A national school of architecture is to be founded in New York City by the architects of the Society of Beaux Arts.

Owing to dissatisfaction on the part of the New York State law examining boards with Harvard School certificates, a measure has there been enacted by which attendance hereafter will be compulsory instead of optional.

The University of Michigan football season just passed netted a profit of $25,000 to the Athletic Association.

The Chief of the constabulary of the Philippine Service is to visit Yale soon with the idea of enlisting young men in that service.
