The Committee believes that track work, tennis and golf through the whole year, and basket ball and fencing during the winter give sufficient opportunity for the students to develop on purely healthy lines, without danger to life or limbs, and without the necessity of the undergraduate giving up practically half his time to athletic training, such as is incident to football, baseball, or rowing, and that, followed out on this plan, the individual student has a better chance to interest himself in athletic work, at the same time get individual training and exercise.

The report of the Committee on the School brought out the increasing need for new buildings and for more apparatus in the engineering departments. The report also contains a tribute to the work of Dr. Prickett.

ARCHITECTS ELECTED.

At the last meeting of the Architectural Society the following men were elected members: From 1907, Cummings, Harrison, Lewis, Moore, Hanilli, Buskier; from 1908, Morritt, Baker, Barnes, Molin, Brown, Wolfenden, Youngeram, Haskel; from 1909, Gideon.

Yale's crews are to have a new boathouse next year. Julian W. Curtis, the Yale rowing adviser, has had plans prepared, and the structure will be built on the shore of the Quinnipack river near the present building.
