TREMONT THEATRE.

The Boston public evidently likes "The Student King," at the Tremont Theatre, which is now in the second week of a highly successful four weeks engagement. It is some time since the music lovers of Boston have been so unanimous in their praise of a new composition as has been the case of this delightful romantic opera. Hailed as the most pretentious production in this line in a long time, it has been drawing large audiences, and has been received with unbounded enthusiasm. A better singing organization has never been heard in light opera in Boston. The production as regards investiture is exceedingly elaborate. The opera is in three acts, and each is a gem of beauty. A most unusual feature, which has received much favorable comment, is the male chorus of thirty trained voices. This is, without exception, one of the most successful innovations the light opera stage has ever had, for it is the first time that the percentage of male voices in an organization of this kind has been so high. The voices were selected with the greatest care, and the rousing choruses are sung in a manner that fairly lifts the audience to their feet. Of course there is always a chorus of girls, and very pretty girls they are too. But if they are beautiful of face and figure, they are also beautiful of voice. One of the pleasant surprises of the cast has been Miss Lina Abarbanel, the grand opero singer who has forsaken the grand for the lyric field.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Sam Benard has everything his own way at the Hollis Street Theatre, and the second week of "The Rich Mr. Hoggenheimer" has opened with the greatest of applause and enthusiasm for the jolly comedian who has scored so many successes here in the past, and who is now at his best in this new production.
