HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Maude Adams will enter upon her fourth week with "Peter Pan" at the Hollis Street Theatre, where the audiences remain the largest of the season and the most enthusiastic. It is the event of a season to see such a charming play and such delightful acting, and Peter, the children, the pirates, and all the other features of the play attract all. Miss Adams makes a most attractive boy as the hero of the play, and surpasses even her personal triumphs in "The Little Minister," by her work in this late play by the same author.

TREMONT THEATRE.

Henry W. Savage's splendid production of George Ade's most brilliant comedy, "The College Widow," comes to the Tremont Theatre again next Monday. The sterling worth and wonderful success of this delightful play is too fresh in the memory of local theatre-goers to require any special laudation. From the two Companies of last year Mr. Savage has selected those artists who by exceptionally good work proved themselves best fitted to portray the roles they represent, and which are, therefore, the pick and flower of the last years cast.

PARK THEATRE.

The Park Theatre will be occupied next week by Francis Wilson in the last week of his successful comedy, "The Mountain Climber," each evening and Saturday matinee; the other afternoons will be devoted to "Sir Anthony," the newest comedy from the pen of C. Haddon Chambers, London's brilliant dramatist. Liebler & Co. has selected an exceedingly strong cast to make this the ideal presentation of the season, and among the Boston favorites in the cast are William Norris, Herbert Standing, Verner Clarges, Joseph Touhey, Helen Lowell, Olive Wyndham, Maud Critchton, Mrs. Cooper Cliffe and others.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

E. S. Willard will change his program for his second week at the Colonial Theatre, and will revive all the greatest successes of his repertoire during his farewell nights in Boston. The order of the plays will be: "The Man Who Was," and "David Garrick," Monday evening and Saturday matinee; "The Professors Love Story," Tuesday evening and Wednesday matinee; "Colonel Newcome," Wednesday evening; "The Middleman," Thursday evening; "A Pair of Spectacles," Friday evening, and "Tom Pinch," Saturday evening.
