CORKILL AGAIN.

In the last three miles the leaders began to pull away considerably and the pace was set. Tech led, Cilli clinging. Willard was leading the field by a step 30 yards over. Haskell and the next two runners, Haskell and Colpitts, were far in the rear. About a quarter of a mile from the finish, Haskell who had been in the white cap and almost collapsed and was handing able to be at the finish. When the runners came into sight on the final stretch, Haskell was leading by a narrow margin.

A good distance behind the leaders followed Haskell and Colpitts, the two Cornell runners. Two hundred meters from the finish, Haskell seemed to go all to pieces and a timely sprint gave Haskell a second place, which he held to the tape.

Colpitts and Haskell both forged ahead of Whitely a few yards from the finish, the former slightly ahead of his teammate. Two more Cornell men, Trefo and Young, got fifth and sixth places.
