poverty of the experimental stage. But he had foreseen the extraordinarily industrial development of the last twenty years in which Technology men have had so large a place, and he had planned an Institute broad enough to meet it. That those men are now seen with the educational and industrial demands, that they have given the Institute the high place among colleges is because, through the teaching of the Faculty and through the traditions of the School, they have been imbued with the character of the Founder, who not only established the Institute of Technology but created a whole atmosphere and spirit. Other college founders have endeavored with money. Rogers gave something of far more worth—himself.

"FAITH IN YOURSELF"—THE POINT.
Dr. Alexander Tells Y. M. C. A. This.

Dr. Alexander gave the last talk of the series to the Y. M. C. A. yesterday. He spoke on the various kinds of faith; first faith in God, the faith in Christ, in your fellowmen, and in yourself. He put considerable emphasis on "faith on yourself." This point he illustrated by the story of two boys who were trying to jump over a hitching-post. One had faith and got over. The other lacked faith and fell. It is illustrated by the story of two consulting engineers of the Boston Electric Railway.

Post. Swain spoke on the character of the civil engineering profession, mentioning the lack of public appreciation of our work and the failure of its members to make its true value known to the world.

Mr. Worcester spoke on foundations, and said that the greatest service a man can give his profession is to tell about its failures, so as to help it along. With this talk he tried to dispense with a number of interesting foundation failures with their connection.
